Relationships and Evil Loren Meierding, 2000-10-23 The problem of understanding why an all powerful and wholly good and loving God could permit so much evil to occur has puzzled many Christians as well as skeptics since St Augustine grappled with the problem in the Fourth Century A D Many skeptics have found the evidence of evil sufficient to reject belief in God The author believes that this book provides a comprehensive plausible and satisfying treatment of the problem of evil consistent with the Bible and orthodox Christianity Traditionally free will and the value of character development have been the primary approaches to explaining evil Many evils are not adequately explained by either approach The book offers an approach emphasizing the value of relationships between persons If relationships are to reach the greatest depth and have the greatest value then evils are necessary The environment must provide opportunities to make sacrifices have risks and dangers and have poverty and limited resources One chapter is devoted to analyzing the argument from evil against God's existence It shows evidence limited to evil alone is weak evidence When evidence is expanded to evidence of good as well as evil and evidence for design the evidence supports theism and weighs against naturalistic views Reimagining Therapy through Social Contextual Analyses Bernard Guerin, 2022-07-29 This book attempts to shake up the current complacency around therapy and mental health behaviours by putting therapy fully into context using Social Contextual Analysis showing how changes to our social discursive and societal environments rather than changes to an individual's mind will reduce suffering from the mental health behaviours Guerin challenges many assumptions about both current therapy and psychology and offers alternative approaches synthesized from sociology social anthropology sociolinguistics and elsewhere The book provides a way of addressing the mental health behaviours including actions talking thinking and emotions by taking people's external life situations into account and not relying on an imagined internal source Guerin describes the broad contexts for current Western therapies referring to social discursive cultural societal and economic contexts and suggests that we need to research the components of therapies and stop treating therapies as units He reframes different types of therapy away from their abstract jargons offering an alternative approach grounded in our real social worlds aligning with new thinking that challenges the traditional methods of therapy and also providing a better framework for rethinking psychology itself The book ultimately suggests more emphasis should be put on mental health behaviours as arising from social issues including the modern contexts of extreme capitalism excessive bureaucracy weakened discursive communities and changing forms of social relationships Practical guidelines are provided for building the reimagined therapies into clinics and institutions where labelling and pathologizing the mental health behaviours will no longer be needed By putting mental health behaviours and therapy into a naturalistic or ecological social sciences framework this book will be practical and fascinating reading for professional therapists counsellors social workers and mental health nurses as well as academics interested in psychology and the social sciences more generally      Information Systems Christine Urquhart,Faten Hamad,Dina Tbaishat,Alison Yeoman,2017-12-21 This new book takes a holistic view of information architecture to offer information professionals a vital critical analysis of library and information service architecture with discussion of methods tools techniques and trends The editors argue that library assessment literature has primarily dealt with performance measurement and change management strategies leaving little on the ways of looking at the process architecture of library and information services and on methods for business process analysis Information Systems Process and practice aims to fill that gap with a combination of theory and supporting case studies written by an international line up of contributors This book discusses research and methods that help libraries and information services work from strategic business objectives through to the organisation of processes that support the information services offeredopens a new area of research investigation on the link between information behaviour research and information systems and architecture illustrated by case studies and projectsuses introductory sections and chapter commentary from the editors to draw the discussions together This will be essential reading for researchers in Information Science specifically in the areas of digital libraries information architecture and information systems It will also be useful for practitioners and students in these areas seeking to understand research issues and challenges and to discover how they have been handled in practice elsewhere      Global Public Relations Alan R.
