Nutrition and Cancer Prevention American Institute for Cancer Research, 2012-12-06 Recent advances have contributed to our understanding of how a plant based diet confers many health advantages and how substances from plants may be effective in the prevention of specific cancers The Ninth Annual Research Conference of the American Institute for Cancer Research has focused on the latest developments in several categories of nutrients of wide contemporary interests The conference sessions included such topics as the effects of soy green tea selenium wine grapes and spices in cancer prevention This conference was held in Washington D C on September 2nd and 3rd 1999 and was entitled Nutrition and Cancer Prevention New Insights Into the Roles of Phytochemicals The discussion program included a session that was devoted to the current status of herbal products in relation to cancer prevention in recognition of the increasing attention that complementary and alternative medicine has been receiving from the scientific community as well as the general public A separate presentation addressed the issue of nutritional supplements and cancer prevention

Nutritional Oncology
George L. Blackburn, Vay Liang W. Go, John Milner, 2011-05-02 Nutritional oncology is an increasingly active interdisciplinary field where cancer is investigated as both a systemic and local disease originating with the changes in the genome and progressing through a multi step process which may be influenced at many points in its natural history by nutritional factors that could impact the prevention of cancer the quality of life of cancer patients and the risk of cancer recurrence in the rapidly increasing population of cancer survivors Since the first edition of this book was published in 1999 the idea that there is a single gene pathway or single drug will provide a cure for cancer has given way to the general view that dietary environmental factors impact the progression of genetic and cellular changes in common forms of cancer This broad concept can now be investigated within a basic and clinical research context for specific types of cancer This book attempts to cover the current available knowledge in this new field of nutritional oncology written by invited experts This book attempts to provide not only the theoretical and research basis for nutritional oncology but will offer the medical oncologist and other members of multidisciplinary groups treating cancer patients practical information on nutrition assessment and nutritional regimens including micronutrient and phytochemical supplementation The editors hope that this volume will stimulate increased research education and patient application of the principles of nutritional oncology
