

Anna Clarke was born in Fife Town in April 1970 and it was here as well as in Montreal and Oxford that she received her education. She studied a lot during her childhood as her father, Professor Ian Ford Clarke, the educationist, moved to different universities. She started reading for a degree in Mathematics but was interrupted by illness. Later she went on to take an external degree in Economics. She has held a wide variety of jobs, largely in publishing and university administration, and was for some years secretary to Victor Gollancz, the publisher. Apart from her intention to continue writing suspense stories, she plans to study for a degree in literature at the Open University. Her main interests now are fiction, philosophy and modern art, as well as psychoanalysis. She has published three previous novels of suspense.

What the critics have said about Anna Clarke's previous novels

THE END OF A SHADOW

"That Anna Clarke's story ... is crisscrossed with suspense would not of itself ensure success ... It is precisely because this Clarke probes far more deeply into her characters than is usual in a novel of this nature that we are held so enthralled."

"An additional pleasure in the excellent picture Miss Clarke gives of the workings of a small firm of publishers' houses lies in the subtle psychology."

"Miss Clarke knows far more about the publishing world than is the point of suggesting the intriguing, suspicious and enigmatic of the whole, right to the end."

The Times Literary Supplement

A MIND TO MURDER

"An effective, neatly written and cleverly constructed exercise in suspense."

Financial Times

"Impassioned creation of a harassed professional whose family being disintegrating is his indirectly supporter."

The Times Literary Supplement

"Ingeniously conceived and rather handsomely conceived." Star

PLOT COUNTER-PLOT

Anna Clarke

Gifted, rich, successful: that was how Helen Mitchell appeared to those who met her expensive needs, including Great Ashwood, an extraordinary young brother who was desperate for love. Why then was Helen writing the new novel in her pen in secret? Why had the past become more dangerous than the present?

This last, economical story gives the reader as Helen narrates her involvement with those from that first casual encounter at a party to the ultimate deadlock from which there seems only one escape. Both are concerned in plotting, in manipulating character and events. These inseparable souls are become a character in the other's story. Whose pen will write the final word?

This is a terse, visceral tale, novel of a deadly battle of wits between two ingenious minds, written with insight and compassion and skilfully representing past and present, fantasy and reality.

Foreword by Helen Mitchell
