Re Analysis In Sentence Processing:

Reanalysis in Sentence Processing J. Fodor, Fernanda Ferreira, 2013-03-14 The topic addressed in this volume lies within the study of sentence processing which is one of the major divisions of psycholinguistics The goal has been to understand the structure and functioning of the mental mechanisms involved in sentence comprehension Most of the experimental and theoretical work during the last twenty or thirty years has focused on first pass parsing the process of assigning structure to a sentence as its words are encountered one at a time from left to right One important guiding idea has been to delineate the processing mechanisms by studying where they fail For this purpose we identify types of sentences which perceivers have trouble assigning structure to An important class of perceptually difficult sentences are those which contain temporary ambiguities Since the parsing mechanism cannot tell what the intended structure is it may make an incorrect guess Then later on in the sentence the structure assignment process breaks down because the later words do not fit with the incorrect structural analysis This is called a garden path situation When it occurs the parsing mechanism must somehow correct itself and find a different analysis which is compatible with the incoming words This reanalysis process is the subject of the research reported here Explicit and Implicit Prosody in Sentence Processing Lyn Frazier, Edward Gibson, 2015-06-23 Top researchers in prosody and psycholinguistics present their research and their views on the role of prosody in processing speech and also its role in reading The volume characterizes the state of the art in an important area of psycholinguistics How are general constraints on prosody timing and intonation melody used to constrain the parsing and interpretation of spoken language How are they used to assign a default prosody intonation in silent reading and more generally what is the role of phonology in reading Prosody and intonation interact with phonology syntax semantics and pragmatics and thus are at the very core of language processes Sentence Processing: A Crosslinguistic Perspective Dieter Hillert, 1998-07-13 The innovative element of this volume is its overview of the fundamental psycholinguistic topics involved in sentence processing While most psycholinguistic studies focus on a single language and induce a general model of universal sentence processing this volume proposes a cross linguistic approach It contains two distinct features first embraced in the 18th century by brothers Freiherr Wilhelm von Humboldt and Alexander von Humboldt First it offers a linguistic theory that characterizes universal cognitive features of the human language processor or the mind and its biological source independent of a single language structure Second it contains a language theory which considers the diversity of linguistic structures and provides a powerful theory of language processing Contributors cover a wide range of topics including word recognition fixed expressions grammatical constraints empty categories and parsing Their research involves analyses of 12 languages This book provides an overview of central psycholinguistic topics in sentence processing and combines deductive and inductive methods in fashioning an innovative approach The contributors address word recognition fixed expressions grammatical constraints empty categories and parsing Its original papers form a coherent presentation German Sentence Processing B. Hemforth, L. Konieczny, 2013-04-17 The German language offers a variety of possibilities for asking and answering new questions in psycholinguistic sentence comprehension research. The collection of papers in this volume contributes to the increasingly relevant crosslinguistic comparison of mechanisms of human sentence processing. The topics covered are incremental structure assembly on line ambiguity resolution and phonological contextual and working memory aspects of reanalysis. The new theoretical and experimental insights presented in this volume should be of great interest to linguists and psychologists working on human language comprehension. The introductory information provided by the authors makes the volume easily accessible to advanced students. Japanese Sentence Processing Reiko Mazuka, Noriko Nagai, 2013-05-13 This volume is a direct result of the International Symposium on Japanese Sentence Processing held at Duke University. The symposium provided the first opportunity for researchers in three disciplinary areas from both Japan and the United States to participate in a conference where they could discuss issues concerning Japanese syntactic processing. The goals of the symposium were three fold: to illuminate the mechanisms of Japanese sentence processing from the viewpoints of linguistics, psycholinguistics, and computer science; to synthesize findings about the mechanisms of Japanese sentence processing by researchers in these three fields in Japan and the United States; to lay foundations for future interdisciplinary research in Japanese sentence processing as well as international collaborations between researchers in Japan and the United States. The chapters in this volume have been written from the points of view of three different disciplines with various immediate objectives: from building usable speech understanding systems to investigating the nature of competence grammars for natural languages. All of the papers share the long term goal of understanding the nature of human language processing mechanisms. The book is concerned with two central issues: the universality of language processing mechanisms and the nature of the relation between the components of linguistic knowledge and language processing. This volume demonstrates that interdisciplinary research can be fruitful and provides groundwork for further research in Japanese sentence processing. Bilingual Sentence Processing Eva M. Fernández, 2003-03-27 The cross linguistic differences documented in studies of relative clause attachment offer an invaluable opportunity to examine a particular aspect of bilingual sentence processing. Do bilinguals process their two languages as if they were monolingual speakers of each? This volume provides a review of existing research on relative clause attachment showing that speakers of languages like English attach relative clauses differently than do speakers of languages like Spanish. Fernández reports the findings of an investigation with monolinguals and bilinguals tested using speeded on line and unspeeded off line methodology with materials in both English and Spanish. The experiments reveal similarities across the groups when the procedure is speeded but differences with unspeeded questionnaires. The monolinguals replicate the standard cross linguistic differences while bilinguals have language independent preferences determined by language dominance. Bilinguals process stimuli in either of their languages according to the general preferences of monolinguals of their dominant language Sentence Processing Roger P. G. van Gompel, 2013-09-11 What are the psychological processes involved in comprehending sentences How do we process the structure of sentences and how do we understand their meaning Do children bilinguals and people with language impairments process sentences in the same way as healthy monolingual adults These are just some of the many questions that sentence processing researchers have tried to answer by conducting ever more sophisticated experiments making this one of the most productive and exciting areas in experimental language research in recent years This book is the first to provide a comprehensive state of the art overview of this important field It contains 10 chapters written by world leading experts which discuss influential theories of sentence processing and important experimental evidence with a focus on recent developments in the area The chapters also analyse research that has investigated how people process the structure and meaning of sentences and how sentences are understood within their context This comprehensive and authoritative work will appeal to students and researchers in the field of sentence processing as well anyone with an interest in psychology and linguistics Neurobiology of Language Gregory Hickok, Steven L. Small, 2015-08-15 Neurobiology of Language explores the study of language a field that has seen tremendous progress in the last two decades Key to this progress is the accelerating trend toward integration of neurobiological approaches with the more established understanding of language within cognitive psychology computer science and linguistics This volume serves as the definitive reference on the neurobiology of language bringing these various advances together into a single volume of 100 concise entries The organization includes sections on the field's major subfields with each section covering both empirical data and theoretical perspectives Foundational neurobiological coverage is also provided including neuroanatomy neurophysiology genetics linguistic and psycholinguistic data and models Foundational reference for the current state of the field of the neurobiology of language Enables brain and language researchers and students to remain up to date in this fast moving field that crosses many disciplinary and subdisciplinary boundaries Provides an accessible entry point for other scientists interested in the area but not actively working in it e g speech therapists neurologists and cognitive psychologists Chapters authored by world leaders in the field the broadest most expert coverage available Perspectives on Sentence Processing Charles Clifton, Jr., Lyn Frazier, Keith Rayner, Charles Clifton, 2015-12-22 One of the liveliest forums for sharing psychological linguistic philosophical and computer science perspectives on psycholinguistics has been the annual meeting of the CUNY Sentence Processing Conference Documenting the state of the art in several important approaches to sentence processing this volume consists of selected papers that had been presented at the Sixth CUNY Conference The editors not only present the main themes that ran through the conference but also honor the breadth of the presentations from disciplines including linguistics experimental psychology and computer science The variety of sentence processing topics examined includes how evoked brain potentials reflect sentence comprehension how auditory words are processed how various sources of grammatical and nongrammatical information are coordinated and used how sentence processing and language acquisition might be related This distinctive volume not only presents the most exciting current work in sentence processing but also places this research into the broader context of theorizing about it Lexical Representations and Sentence Processing Maryellen C. MacDonald, 1997 The papers in this special issue reflect the increased status on lexical representations in sentence processing research Second Language Sentence Processing Alan Juffs, Guillermo A. Rodríguez, 2014-12-02 This addition to the Cognitive Science and Second Language Acquisition series presents a comprehensive review of the latest research findings on sentence processing in second language acquisition The book begins with a broad overview of the core issues of second language sentence processing research and then narrows its focus by dedicating individual chapters to each of these key areas While a number of publications have discussed research findings on knowledge of formal syntactic principles as part of theories of second language acquisition there are fewer resources dedicated to the role of second language sentence processing in this context This volume will act as the first full length literature review of the field on the market Case Marking and Reanalysis Cynthia L. Allen, 1999 It is commonly stated that the loss of case marking distinctions between Old and Middle English had profound consequences for the syntax of the language In particular linguists have attributed both the loss of the impersonal constructions such as methinks and the introduction of new passives such as he was given a book directly to the loss of case marking distinctions However the existing analyses generally suffer from empirical inadequacies insufficient available information concerning the case marking systems as opposed to the forms makes it difficult to determine exactly when crucial marking distinctions disappeared Dr Allen makes a careful examination of the primary evidence for how the loss of case distinctions proceeded and of the temporal relationship between changes in morphology and particular syntactic changes She demonstrates that morphological change had a less direct role in the triggering of syntactic change than is usually assumed and that some changes traditionally considered to be the result of syntactic reanalysis are better treated in other ways Some changes to grammatical relations were not the result of syntactic reanalysis but were caused by changes in verbal semantics while others which have been treated as syntactic reanalysis in fact involved no change to grammatical relations but only to the possible case marking associated with subjects Endorsement Fruitful interaction between historical linguistics and linguistic theory is rarely the aim and even more rarely achieved Allen's work is a remarkable exception It is her avowed intention to bring together the methodology assumptions and principles of the two disciplines to show that each can benefit from the other This she does with signal success Allen presents a careful and detailed examination of changes in case marking and claimed relationships to syntactic changes This in itself is valuable and significant More than this Allen provides a thoroughly worked out clearly presented model of historical linguistic investigation a rewarding blend of descriptive rigour and theoretical insight Australian Journal of Linguistics 24 02 1998 MIT Working Papers in Linguistics, 2005 Fuzzy Lexical Representations in the Nonnative Mental Lexicon Kira Gor, Denisa Bordag, Anna
