One of the nineteenth century's most significant papers, A Dynamical Theory of the Electromagnetic Field, appears here along with similarly influential expositions of Maxwell's dynamical theory of gases. The author's extensive range of interests is well represented from his discussions of color blindness and the composition of Saturn's rings to his essays on geometrical optics, ether, and protecting buildings from lightning. His less technical writings are featured as well, including items written for the Encyclopedia Britannica and Nature magazine, book reviews, and popular lectures. Striking in their originality, these papers offer a wealth of stimulating and inspiring reading to modern students of mathematics and physics.

The publication in 1890 of the two volume Scientific Papers of James Clerk Maxwell edited by W. D. Niven was one of the two objects of a committee formed for the purpose of securing a fitting memorial of him, the other object being the commissioning of a marble bust for the Cavendish Laboratory. Before his death in 1879 at the age of 48, Clerk Maxwell had made major contributions to many areas of theoretical physics and mathematics, not least his discoveries in the fields of electromagnetism and of the kinetic theory of gases, which have been regarded as laying the foundations of all modern physics. He is generally considered the third most important physicist of all time, after Newton and Einstein. These collected shorter works, beginning with a paper written at the age of 15, show the wide range of Clerk Maxwell's interests across mathematics, physics, and chemistry.
