

Two Decades of NAFTA

In 1994 Canada, the United States, and Mexico signed the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) to reduce or eliminate tariffs on many goods traded among the three countries. Since its implementation, NAFTA has had mixed results. While it has helped to increase trade throughout North America, the gains for the three countries have not been equal. Supporters of NAFTA point to lower product prices and increased industrial integration among the nations. Opponents of the agreement argue it has led to job displacement and has done little to improve the quality of life in Mexico.
