Augustus Earle , 1980 Augustus Earle 1793 1838 was born to travel and to paint Living in the era before photography Earle was one of the world's most irrepressible travel artists His paintings are valuable both as works of art and as documentary records of historic and ethnographic significance This publication gives an overview of some of Earle's most significant works held by the National Library of Australia Guide to the Collections National Library of Australia, 1910

Travellers Art National Library of Australia, 2003 Travellers Art presents rare late eighteenth nineteenth and early twentieth century drawings watercolours sketchbooks diaries hand drawn maps manuscripts and photographs all of which were created while travelling Selected from the National Library's collections for their first hand immediacy and fidelity to the subject they are the personal narratives of travelling artists diarists and explorers English, Colonial, Modern and Maori Anna Crighton, 2014-11-24 How and why do works make their way into a public art collection Who decides what will be hung on the walls placed on plinths displayed in cases These important but seldom discussed questions lie at the heart of this cultural biography of the 70 years during which the Robert McDougall Art Gallery was Christchurch's civic art gallery The book explains how the collection came together how it developed and how the public and artists and critics reacted to it The book is presented in three parts each of which has its own introduction It provides an analytical framework in detail and in context by defining terms and explaining particular recurrent concepts These include and indeed highlight selection and presentation cultures derived from the core museological functions of collection and display These together with the framework's other concepts are related to mainstream methodology in the social sciences particularly political science. The latter is especially relevant to the study of a public art gallery owned and funded by the public and its elected representatives and controlled by these representatives and their appointed agents. Furthermore, the framework explores the concept of post colonial tensions between heritages specifically indigenous transplanted and autochthonous ones. The significance of this becomes more apparent when the concepts used in relevant previous studies of specific public art galleries in New Zealand are reviewed. There is also a strong emphasis on the development of a public Maori art collection. It is a story too of vivid and influential personalities the directors and curators who fought for the gallery and the artists represented in it. But the book is more than just the story of a single gallery's collection; it shines a light on concerns and patterns that will be familiar to galleries everywhere and provides a unique perspective on New Zealand's cultural development over much of the twentieth century.

Arts and Crafts Movement in New Zealand, 1870-1940 Ann Calhoun, 2000. Reveals the exquisite work and extraordinary skill of a group of New Zealand artists, most of them women, working in a wide variety of art and craft forms. This flowering of local talent originated in the British Arts and Crafts movement and is associated with the growth of art education in this country; its quiet but dedicated character also suggests much about the situation of women in the years before and after 1900. Atlas of World Art John Onians, 2004. Combines a survey of world art with maps showing the associations and dissemination of culture across the globe.
