Athens Demapped Dimitris Plantzos, 2025-10-06 Athens Demapped Archaeology Heritage and Urban Transformation explores the entangled relationships between classical heritage memory and modernity in the evolving city of Athens Dimitris Plantzos interrogates how archaeology tourism and urban planning have shaped the city s identity revealing Athens not as a timeless monument to antiquity but as a contested landscape where past and present collide Rather than a neutral cultural asset Athens classical legacy has been mapped commodified and weaponised used both to forge collective memory and to marginalise dissenting voices Plantzos critically engages with nostalgia gentrification and the politics of heritage exposing how the myth of Athens as the cradle of Western civilisation continues to serve shifting ideological and economic agendas At the heart of the book is the concept of demapping the erasure or overwriting of certain spaces histories and communities to reinforce dominant narratives and commercial interests Drawing on archaeological insight urban theory and cultural critique Athens Demapped reimagines the city as a site of overlapping histories and contested futures At a moment of rapid urban transformation this book offers a vital perspective on the uses of the past and the right to the city Essential reading for scholars of heritage politics and space The Enchanted Rose Pasquale De Marco, 2025-07-24 The enchanted rose is a
