Crop Spraying and the Health of Residents and Bystanders Great Britain. Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution, 2007 This report addresses a complex and controversial issue the human health risks associated with the use of agricultural pesticides Some people are extremely concerned about their potential exposure to pesticides arising because they occupy properties adjacent to farmland or because they have or have had access to such land for example when using footpaths The official position in the UK in response to these concerns has been that a robust approach to the assessment of human health risks associated with pesticide exposure already exists and that there is no scientific case for taking additional measures such as the introduction of no spray buffer zones to protect members of the public who may be in the vicinity of a sprayed area But those who consider themselves to be adversely affected by pesticide spraying have not been reassured and have continued to campaign for the adoption of more precautionary measures

Adapting Institutions to Climate Change Great Britain. Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution, 2010 The overwhelming scientific consensus is that the earth is warming because of human activities Adaptation will be necessary even if mitigation efforts are markedly increased because we are already locked in to climate change as a result of historic greenhouse gas emissions Projections show that it is likely that global average temperatures will rise by 2 degrees C and there is the potential for a 4 degree C rise by the end of the century UK projections suggest warmer drier summers and warmer wetter winters The consequences are likely to be profound even devastating with more extreme events floods drought and heat waves coupled with sea level rises Policies and practice on water management coast protection and nature conservation will need to change This report explores how institutions should adapt their policies to a changing climate and offers a ten point check list to be followed by all organisations The Commission found many institutions are poorly prepared to adapt to climate change and many have simply not started to consider it The Commission makes recommendations designed to help institutions develop their capacity to respond to this challenge In contrast to climate change mitigation where local actions have global benefits adaptation is primarily about local action with local consequences that may differ markedly in different parts of the UK
