Narrative of an Expedition to Explore the River Zaire, Usually Called the Congo James Hingston Tuckey, 1818. James Kingston Tuckey 1776-1816 was a British naval officer who, after service in the Caribbean, Asia, and Australia, was asked by the British government to command an expedition to explore the Congo River. He was to ascertain in particular whether the Congo was connected to the Niger River. Tuckey traveled 480 kilometers up the Congo, mapping the river and gathering ethnographic and geographic information. Before he could complete his mission, he died of fever on October 4, 1816, near Moanda in the present-day Democratic Republic of the Congo. This work consists of his journal, which he kept until shortly before his death, supplemented by observations by other members of the expedition. An appendix offers a basic vocabulary of two African languages, Malemba and Embomma.
