The hazardous working conditions have increased the risk of overload stress and labour exhaustion for construction workers. This study aims to identify and analyze the difficulties construction workers face in organized and unorganized industries face. With this goal in mind, a questionnaire was developed, and interviews were conducted to gather information. By identifying pertinent areas for future research, this study not only helps the method's widespread application in construction labour management but also enhances the method's efficacy and efficiency. Consequently, this study adds to both the body of knowledge and the practice of the welfare of construction workers. The findings collaborate with other literature published in this field of study. (Rose et al., 2021) explains that the construction industry has a well-known danger of accidents, injuries, and fatalities, particularly for migrant or non-national workers who make up a sizable portion of the workforce. Monitoring workers' dangerous economic, social, health, political, legal, and safety behaviors on construction sites is essential and crucial for project managers or safety managers (Guo et al., 2014). A pleasant and secure workplace is a viable strategy for controlling economic, social, health, and safety (ESHS) behaviors on the job site. This, however, mostly relies on manual observation and recording, which limits its widespread implementation in the construction sector because it not only takes a lot of time and money but also makes it impossible to observe a whole building site or all personnel (Guo et al., 2016).
