Interaction around the Event of Death Vahid Parvaresh, Alessandro Capone, 2017-06-02 This volume brings together a wide array of papers which explore among other things to what extent languages and cultures are variable with respect to the interactions around the event of death Motivated by J L Mey's idea of the pragmeme a situated speech act the volume has both theoretical and practical implications for scholars working in different fields of enquiry As the papers in this volume reveal despite the terminological differences between various disciplines the interactions around the event of death serve to provide solace not only to the dying but also to the family and friends of the deceased thus helping them to accommodate to the new state of affairs Death and Survival in the Book of Job Dan Mathewson, 2006-06-05 The Book of Job functions as literature of survival where the main character Job deals with the trauma of suffering attempts to come to terms with a collapsed moral and theological world and eventually re connects the broken pieces of his world into a new moral universe which explains and contains the trauma of his recent experiences and renders his life meaningful again The key is Job's death imagery In fact with its depiction of death in the prose tale and its frequent discussions of death in the poetic sections Job may be the most death oriented book in the bible In particular Job in his speeches articulates his experience of suffering as the experience of death To help understand this focus on death in Job we turn to the psychohistorian Robert Lifton who investigates the effects on the human psyche of various traumatic experiences wars natural disasters etc According to Lifton survivors of disaster often sense that their world has collapsed and they engage in a struggle to go on living Part of this struggle involves finding meaning in death and locating death's place in the continuity of life. Like many such survivors, Job's understanding of death is a flashpoint indicating his bewilderment or desymbolization in the early portions of his speeches and then later on his arrival at what Lifton calls resymbolization, the reconfiguration of a world that can account for disaster and render death and life meaningful again. Psychosocial Interventions in End-of-Life Care Peggy Sturman

Gordon, 2015-11-19 The concept of a good death has been hotly debated in medical circles for decades. This volume delves into the possibility and desirability of a good death by presenting the psychosocial measures of care as a crucial component, such as religion, existentialism, hope, and meaning-making. The volume also focuses on oncologic psychiatry and the influence of technology as a means to alleviate pain and suffering and potentially provide relief to those at the end of life. Such initiatives are aimed at diminishing pain and are socially bolstering and emotionally comforting to ensure a peaceful closure with life as opposed to a battle waged. Utilizing the most recent information from medical journals and books to present the latest on healthcare and dying today, this volume crosses the boundaries of thanatology, psychology, religion, spirituality, medical ethics, and public health. Researching Death, Dying and Bereavement Erica Borgstrom, Julie Ellis, Kate Woodthorpe, 2018-10-22 This book examines research on death, dying, and bereavement and how our approaches, perceptions, and expectations shape what we can know about the end of life. The contributions include personal and professional reflections and practical suggestions for conducting research in this field. The volume stems from the resurgence of the international and interdisciplinary study of death in the last 20 years. Within this empirical research is often viewed as sensitive but little has been written about the experience of conducting research in this area. There has thus been little reflection on the opportunities and challenges faced in undertaking research as the field of death studies grows, including the accommodation and recognition of cultural differences. This volume seeks to in part address this gap. The chapters in this book were originally published in the Mortality journal and the Death Studies journal. Natural Burial Douglas

Davies, Hannah Rumble, 2012-07-26 From the 1990s the British developed an interest in natural burial, also known as woodland green or ecological burial. Natural burial constitutes part of a long historical legacy for British funeral innovation, from Victorian cemetery monuments and garden cemeteries through the birth and rise of cremation to the many things done with cremated remains. The book sets natural burial in the context of such creative dealing with death, grief, mourning, and the celebration of life. Themes from sociology and anthropology combine with psychological issues and theological ideas to show how human emotions take shape and help people consider their own death whilst also dealing with the death of those they love. The authors explore the variety of motivations for people to engage with natural burial and its popular appeal using interviews with people having a relationship with one natural burial site created by the Church of England but open to all. They illustrate people's understandings of life and death in the sacred, secular, and mixed worlds of modern Britain. Death
