Jejeebhoy,2004 The last decade has witnessed many changes in the sexual and reproductive health situation in India The policy and programme environment has undergone a significant shift from a narrow target oriented family planning approach to a broader orientation that stresses sexual and reproductive health and choice There have also been changes in the context of sexual and reproductive health Some changes such as declining infant mortality increased access to skilled attendance at delivery and declining unmet need for contraception have been positive Other trends are disturbing such as stagnating levels of maternal mortality the spread of sexually transmitted infections STIs notably HIV the persistence of wide gender imbalances and the limited exercise of reproductive rights by many particularly women Moreover the decade has raised concern about the unique sexual and reproductive health needs of the young It has also seen the absorption of new technologies into everyday sexual and reproductive life Finally while the need for a rights based approach has been recognised this has not been reflected in terms of government s accountability in the realisation of health rights In short despite the strides made on several fronts India continues to face a situation of considerable sexual and reproductive ill health and lack of informed choice This volume provides a comprehensive overview of the reproductive health and rights situation and highlights major programmatic challenges and directions for policy relevant empirical research on sexual and reproductive health in India realisation of health rights In short despite the strides made on several fronts India continues to face a situation of considerable sexual and reproductive ill health and lack of informed choice This volume provides a comprehensive overview of the reproductive health and rights situation and highlights major programmatic challenges and directions for policy relevant empirical research on sexual and reproductive health in India
