

A scenic rural landscape featuring a cluster of traditional houses with dark roofs and red brick chimneys nestled in a valley. In the foreground, several horses of various colors (white, brown, and grey) are grazing in a lush green field. The background shows rolling green hills under a soft, golden light, suggesting late afternoon or early morning. The overall atmosphere is peaceful and idyllic.

Research in Rural Sociology and Development Vol. 8 Harry K. Schwarzweller, 2000      Research in Rural Sociology and Development Harry K. Schwarzweller, 1984      Routledge International Handbook of Rural Studies Mark Shucksmith, David L. Brown, 2016-05-20 Rural societies around the world are changing in fundamental ways both at their own initiative and in response to external forces The Routledge International Handbook of Rural Studies examines the organisation and transformation of rural society in more developed regions of the world taking an interdisciplinary and problem focused approach Written by leading social scientists from many countries it addresses emerging issues and challenges in innovative and provocative ways to inform future policy This volume is organised around eight emerging social economic and environmental challenges Demographic change Economic transformations Food systems and land Environment and resources Changing configurations of gender and rural society Social and economic equality Social dynamics and institutional capacity Power and governance Cross cutting these challenges are the growing interdependence of rural and urban the rise in inequality within and between places the impact of fiscal crisis on rural societies neoliberalism power and agency and rural areas as potential sites of resistance The Routledge International Handbook of Rural Studies is required reading for anyone concerned with the future of rural areas      From Community to Consumption Alessandro Bonanno, Hans Baker, Raymond Jussaume, Yoshio Kawamura, Mark Shucksmith, 2010-09-08 Contains papers presented at the XII World Congress of Rural Sociology held in South Korea in 2008 This book provides an international view of the advanced production in rural sociology      Diffusion Research in Rural Sociology Frederick C. Fliegel, 1993 Fliegel overviews and summarizes research on the spread of innovations through rural populations The volume begins with a look at the discovery of diffusion as a patterned process in the 1940s and examines the creation of the classical model to explain diffusion as a transfer of information Fliegel then notes how the classical model changed to accommodate the particular socioeconomic condition when the model was applied to developing countries after 1945 He concludes by commenting on the revival of interest in diffusion research the further development and refinement of the classical model and the modern emphasis on conservation oriented innovations rather than on innovations that enhance production Fliegel overviews and summarizes research on the spread of innovations through rural populations The volume gives detailed attention to the development and utilization of diffusion research from the 1940s to 1970 and traces the creation of the classical model for explaining the spread of innovations Because the classical model seemed inadequate when applied to the diffusion of innovations in lesser developed countries after World War II the model changed to accommodate new research The book notes the role of diffusion research in developing countries after the second world war the change of the classical model to include socioeconomic conditions peculiar to these countries and the growth and development of diffusion research to the present day The first part of the book provides an historical survey of diffusion research through 1970 The chapters in this section discuss the discovery of diffusion as a patterned process the development of the classical model to explain diffusion as an information transfer and the implementation of diffusion research in developing countries after 1945 The second part devoted to recent trends includes chapters on the further development and refinement of the classical model the revival of interest in diffusion research and the modern emphasis on conservation oriented innovations rather than on ones that enhance production An extensive bibliography concludes this comprehensive study

Research in Rural Sociology Ane Development William W. Falk,Thomas A.. Lyson,1989      New Dimensions in Rural Policy ,1986      Social Structure Of Contemporary China Xueyi Lu,2012-07-24 This book is the third study done by the Research Group on Social Structure Change in Contemporary China a group affiliated with the Institute of Sociology Chinese Academy of Social Sciences The group has focused on the process of development and change in contemporary Chinese social structure and come to the following conclusions Contemporary China is transitioning from a traditional agricultural and rural society to a modern industrialized and urban society from a highly centralized planned economy to a robust socialist market economic system The entire society is undertaking an unprecedented evolution During the three decades of reform and opening up China has made brilliant achievements never seen before in history Now China is in a critical period of reform and opening up with very complex far reaching and closely intertwined social problems which are also unprecedented After deep and detailed analysis the Research Group believes that these problems cannot be resolved only by economic methods In order to get to the roots of these social problems China must develop new social policies strengthen the social structure and carry out social system reform The core purpose of the book is to recommend theories and methods on social structure to society and readers and to investigate the development and change in China s social structure We believe that social structure theory a brand new point of view to analyze the current situation is capable of deciphering the social contradictions in China s development to some extent as opposed to mere economic theory which is inadequate to fully address the structural problems in China
