Beyond Mimesis and Convention Roman Frigg, Matthew Hunter, 2010-04-28 Representation is a concern crucial to the sciences and the arts alike Scientists devote substantial time to devising and exploring representations of all kinds From photographs and computer generated images to diagrams charts and graphs from scale models to abstract theories representations are ubiquitous in and central to science Likewise after spending much of the twentieth century in proverbial exile as abstraction and Formalist aesthetics reigned supreme representation has returned with a vengeance to contemporary visual art Representational photography video and ever evolving forms of new media now figure prominently in the globalized art world while this return of the real has re energized problems of representation in the traditional media of painting and sculpture If it ever really left representation in the arts is certainly back Central as they are to science and art these representational concerns have been perceived as different in kind and as objects of separate intellectual traditions Scientific modeling and theorizing have been topics of heated debate in twentieth century philosophy of science in the analytic tradition while representation of the real and ideal has never moved far from the core humanist concerns of historians of Western art Yet both of these traditions have recently arrived at a similar impasse Thinking about representation has polarized into oppositions between mimesis and convention Advocates of mimesis understand some notion of mimicry or similarity resemblance or imitation as the core of representation something represents something else if and only if the former mimics the latter in some relevant way Such mimetic views stand in stark contrast to conventionalist accounts of representation which see voluntary and arbitrary stipulation as the core of representation Occasional exceptions only serve to prove the rule that mimesis and convention govern current thinking about representation in both analytic philosophy of science and studies of visual art This conjunction can hardly be dismissed as a matter of mere coincidence In fact researchers in philosophy of science and the history of art have increasingly found themselves trespassing into the domain of the other community pilfering ideas and approaches to representation Cognizant of the limitations of the accounts of representation available within the field philosophers of science have begun to look outward toward the rich traditions of thinking about representation in the visual and literary arts Simultaneously scholars in art history and affiliated fields like visual studies have come to see images generated in scientific contexts as not merely interesting illustrations derived from high art but as sophisticated visualization techniques that dynamically challenge our received conceptions of representation and aesthetics Beyond Mimesis and Convention Representation in Art and Science is motivated by the conviction that we students of the sciences and arts are best served by confronting our mutual impasse and by recognizing the shared concerns that have necessitated our covert acts of kleptomania Drawing leading contributors from the philosophy of science the philosophy of literature art history and visual studies our volume takes its brief from our title That is these essays aim to put the evidence of science and of art to work in thinking about representation by offering third or fourth or fifth ways beyond mimesis and convention In so doing our contributors explore a range of topics fictionalism exemplification neuroaesthetics approximate truth that build upon and depart from ongoing conversations in philosophy of science and studies of visual art in ways that will be of interest to both interpretive communities To put these contributions into context the remainder of this introduction aims to survey how our communities have discretely arrived at a place wherein the perhaps surprising collaboration between philosophy of science and art history has become not only salubrious but a matter of necessity Aesthetic Disinterestedness Thomas Hilgers, 2016-12-01 The notion of disinterestedness is often conceived of as antiquated or ideological In spite of this Hilgers argues that one cannot reject it if one wishes to understand the nature of art He claims that an artwork typically asks a person to adopt a disinterested attitude towards what it shows and that the effect of such an adoption is that it makes the person temporarily lose the sense of herself while enabling her to gain a sense of the other Due to an artwork's particular wealth multiperspectivity and dialecticity the engagement with it cannot culminate in the construction of world views but must initiate a process of self critical thinking which is a precondition of real self determination Ultimately then the aesthetic experience of art consists of a dynamic process of losing the sense of oneself while gaining a sense of the other and of achieving selfhood In his book Hilgers spells out the nature of this process by means of rethinking Kant's and Schopenhauer's aesthetic theories in light of more recent developments in philosophy specifically in hermeneutics critical theory and analytic philosophy and within the arts themselves specifically within film and performance art Feminist Aesthetics and the Politics of Modernism Ewa Płonowska Ziarek, 2012 Ewa Ziarek fully articulates a feminist aesthetics focusing on the struggle for freedom in women's literary and political modernism and the devastating impact of racist violence and sexism She examines the contradiction between women's transformative literary and political practices and the oppressive realities of racist violence and sexism and she situates these tensions within the entrenched opposition between revolt and melancholia in studies of modernity and within the friction between material injuries and experimental aesthetic forms Ziarek's political and aesthetic investigations concern the exclusion and destruction of women in politics and literary production and the transformation of this oppression into the inaugural possibilities of writing and action Her study is one of the first to combine an in depth engagement with philosophical aesthetics especially the work of Theodor W Adorno with women's literary modernism particularly the writing of Virginia Woolf and Nella Larsen along with feminist theories on the politics of race and gender By bringing seemingly apolitical gender neutral debates about modernism's experimental forms together with an analysis of violence and destroyed materialities Ziarek challenges both the anti aesthetic subordination of modern literature to its political uses and the appreciation of art's emancipatory potential at the expense of feminist and anti racist political struggles What Makes an Artwork Great? Michael H. Mitias, 2024-06-04 Michael Mitias presents explains and defends in some detail the features that make an artwork great magic universality and the test of time Although some aestheticians beginning with Longinus discussed these features during the past two millennia they did not analyze them comprehensively nor did they justify them from the standpoint of a satisfactory conception of the nature of art In this book the author first explains the nature of the features that make an artifact art and then proceeds to establish the validity of his thesis on firm epistemological and ontological foundations In his endeavor to explicate the nature of this foundation the author answers four questions First what is the genesis of the artwork What makes it art He answers this question by advancing a concept of aesthetic depth The essence of this depth is human meaning Second under what perceptual conditions does this depth come to life in the process of aesthetic perception Third what is the role of the concept of aesthetic depth in the analysis of the nature of the great artwork How does the concept of aesthetic depth function as a principle of explanation Fourth how can we justify the attribution of magic universality and the test of time to the great work of art In short an understanding of the genesis of the artwork aesthetic depth aesthetic value and aesthetic perception is indispensable for an adequate conception of greatness in art
