Qualitative Methods and Health Policy Research Elizabeth Murphy, 2017-07-05 Qualitative researchers have traditionally been cautious about claiming that their work was scientific The right on schools have exaggerated this caution into an outright rejection of science as a model for their work Science is for them outmoded an archaic form of consciousness surviving for a while yet in a degraded form Tyler 1986 200 Scientists assertions that they are in pursuit of truth simply camouflage their own lust for power There is no essential difference between truth and propaganda The authors acknowledge that the boundary between science and propaganda has often been breached and some distrust of scientific claims may be healthy They also question the claim that science creates disinterested and objective knowledge of an observer independent world without concluding that science is impossible The skeptics reservations about qualitative research are based on the deep rooted assumption among natural scientists and some social scientists that there is a world out there prior to and independent of their observations This world can be known objectively in the sense that all observers will if identically placed see it in exactly the same way If a suitable language were available they would also all produce identical descriptions From these observations they can work out the laws governing the world's operations The authors try to resolve these contrary claims by asserting that science is a procedural commitment It consists of openness to refutation a conscientious and systematic search for contradictory evidence and a readiness to subject one's preconceptions to critical examination The devotion to truth as a regulative ideal is an essential difference between science and propaganda This work is a unique and innovative defense of scientific method

Substance Abuse Michael Floyd, J Paul Seale, 2018-08-17 Series Editors Moira Stewart Judith Belle Brown and Thomas R Freeman Primary care clinicians are often unfamiliar with new and effective methods for detecting substance abuse problems in their earliest stages and the majority of patients with substance abuse problems remain undiagnosed Substance Abuse is written by primary care clinicians and focused to meet the needs of primary care providers demonstrating how the patient centered clinical method can assist clinicians in learning how to diagnose this complex psychosocial disorder This book describes how to use state of the art screening techniques and how to understand and motivate patients to decrease or eliminate harmful use of alcohol and drugs It presents the latest scientific findings and gives examples of using a patient centered approach as well as describing specific communication skills with samples of dialogue illustrating their use in helping substance abusing patients This is essential reading for all family doctors paediatricians gynaecologists psychiatrists nurses social workers psychologists and all clinicians whose practices include substance abusing patients It will also appeal to counsellors education personnel and all professionals working with substance abusing individuals

Communicating Care Paul Crawford, Brian Brown, Peter Nolan, 1998 The authors of this book use their unique blend of experience to synthesise theoretical studies They offer critical analysis of a wide range of examples of good and bad use of language in order to guide nurses towards models of good practice Full consideration is given to the changing nature of the health care environment and to the need to address ethical legal and professional issues beyond the fundamentals of patient nurse interaction

The SAGE Handbook of Qualitative Research Norman K. Denzin (ed), Yvonna S. Lincoln, 2005 A thoroughly revised updated edition this volume includes new chapters on auto ethnography critical race theory queer theory testimonies

Partnership for Health Christina S. Beck, Sandra L. Ragan, Athena du Pre,, Athena du Pre, 2013-11-05 In the 1960s feminists voiced their outrage about the health care system in the United States which routinely discriminated against women and in so doing literally jeopardized their health and well being Over a decade later women's health advocates still stressed the need for reform of this male dominated institution because of the on going threat to the health of American women In the 1990s nearly 40 years after women began their fight for quality and equitable treatment from the medical profession women unfortunately continue to confront problems on numerous levels including discrimination in medical research and in the availability of insurance and health care providers Most alarming however is the fact that women today like women in the 60s and before lack information understanding and adequate diagnoses and treatment from their health caregivers This book extends from a program of research on women s health issues by the authors More than 150 audio taped naturally occurring interactions between health caregivers and their female patients from three different health care settings as well as ethnographic field notes in three additional settings which provide health care to women constitute the data for this investigation They explore the consequentiality of relational issues during women s health care encounters and examine how health care participants save face enact roles co construct their encounters and accomplish the objective of education and medical care Unlike earlier works this study utilizes an extensive data collection derived directly from hundreds of interactions between health care providers and their patients as opposed to surveys or case studies of singular practitioners The authors examine the data in light of insights from a variety of theoretical perspectives and are committed to exploring the implication that medical encounters are collaboratively managed by both patients and caregivers Given these theoretical and empirical contributions the authors believe this book will advance present understanding in the areas of health and relational communication women s health care gender issues in communication conversation analysis discourse processes and institutional talk
