Shaping Medieval Landscapes Settlement Society Environment:

Shaping Medieval Landscapes Tom Williamson, 2003 A book which puts the environment back where it belongs at the centre of the historical stage To explain the rich complex patterns in the English landscape today we have to understand how the land was farmed in the medieval period Some regions had large villages with extensive open fields others had scattered hamlets and less communal forms of agriculture These differences are still with us Environment, Society and

Landscape in Early Medieval England Tom Williamson, 2015 The origins of England's regional cultures are here shown to be strongly influenced by the natural environment and geographical features The Anglo Saxon period was crucial in the development of England's character its language and much of its landscape and culture were forged in the period between the fifth and the eleventh centuries Historians and archaeologists have long been fascinated by its regional variations by the way in which different parts of the country displayed marked differences in social structures settlement patterns and field systems In this controversial and wide ranging study the author argues that such differences were largely a consequence of environmental factors of the influence of climate soils and hydrology and of the patterns of contact and communication engendered by natural topography He also suggests that such environmental influences have been neglected over recent decades by generations of scholars who are embedded in an urban culture and largely divorced from the natural world and that an appreciation of the fundamental role of physical geography in shaping human affairs can throw much new light on a number of important debates about early medieval society The book will be essential reading for all those interested in the character of the Anglo Saxon and Scandinavian settlements in early medieval social and territorial organization and in the origins of the England's medieval landscapes Tom Williamson is Professor of Landscape History University of East Anglia he has written widely on landscape archaeology agricultural history and the history of landscape design Middle Saxon' Settlement and Society: The Changing Rural Communities of Central and Eastern England Duncan Wright, 2015-05-31 This book explores the experiences of rural communities who lived between the seventh and ninth centuries in central and eastern England Combining archaeology with documentary place name and topographic evidences it provides unique insight into social economic and political conditions in Middle Saxon England Dynamics in GIScience Igor Ivan, Jiří Horák, Tomáš Inspektor, 2017-08-23 This book is intended for researchers practitioners and students who are interested in the current trends and want to make their GI applications and research dynamic Time is the key element of contemporary GIS mobile and wearable electronics sensor networks UAVs and other mobile snoopers the IoT and many other resources produce a massive amount of data every minute which is naturally located in space as well as in time Time series data is transformed into almost from the human perspective continuous data streams which require changes to the concept of spatial data recording storage and manipulation This book collects the latest innovative research presented at the GIS Ostrava 2017 conference held in 2017 in Ostrava Czech Republic under the auspices of EuroSDR and EuroGEO The accepted papers cover

Coping with Crisis: The Resilience and Vulnerability of Pre-Industrial Settlements Daniel R. Curtis, 2016-05-13 Why in the pre industrial period were some settlements resilient and stable over the long term while other settlements were vulnerable to crisis Indeed what made certain human habitations more prone to decline or even total collapse than others All pre industrial societies had to face certain challenges exogenous environmental hazards such as earthquakes or plagues economic or political hazards from outside such as warfare or expropriation of property or hazards of their own making such as soil erosion or subsistence crises How then can we explain why some societies were able to overcome or negate these problems while other societies proved susceptible to failure as settlements contracted stagnated were abandoned or even disappeared entirely This book has been stimulated by the questions and hypotheses put forward by a recent disaster studies literature in particular by placing the intrinsic arrangement of societies at the forefront of the explanatory framework Essentially it is suggested that the resilience or vulnerability of habitation has less to do with exogenous crises themselves but on endogenous societal responses which dictate a the extent of destruction caused by crises and the capacity for society to protect itself and b the capacity to create a sufficient recovery By empirically testing the explanatory framework on a number of societies between the Middle Ages and the nineteenth century in England the Low Countries and Italy it is ultimately argued in this book that rather than the protective functions of the state or the market or the implementation of technological innovation or capital investment the most resilient human habitations in the pre industrial period were those than displayed an equitable distribution of property and a well balanced distribution of power between social interest groups Equitable distributions of power and property were the underlying conditions in pre industrial societies that all Deserted Villages Revisited Christopher Dyer, Richard Jones, 2010 Assembling leading experts on the subject this account explores the circumstances surrounding the disappearance of thousands of villages and smaller settlements in England and Wales between 1340 and 1750 By revisiting the deserted villages this breakthrough study addresses questions that have plagued archaeologists geographers and historians since the 1940s including why they were deserted why some villages survived while others were abandoned and who was responsible for their desertion offering a series of exciting insights into the fate of these fascinating sites Lichfield and the Lands of St Chad Andrew Sargent, 2020-07-27 This book focuses on the period from the seventh to eleventh centuries that witnessed the rise and fall of Mercia the great Midland kingdom and later the formation of England Specifically it explores the relationship between the bishops of Lichfield and the multiple communities of their diocese Andrew Sargent tackles the challenge posed by the evidential hole at the heart of Mercia by synthesising different kinds of evidence archaeological textual topographical and toponymical to reconstruct the landscapes inhabited by these communities which intersected at cathedrals and minsters and other less formal meeting places. Most such communities were engaged in the construction of hierarchies and Sargent assigns spiritual lordship a dominant role in this. Tracing the interconnections of these communities he focuses on the development of the Church of Lichfield, an extensive episcopal community situated within a dynamic mesh of institutions and groups within and beyond the diocese from the royal court to the smallest township. The regional elite combined spiritual and secular forms of lordship to advance and entrench their mutual interests and the entanglement of royal and episcopal governance is one of the key focuses of Andrew Sargent's outstanding new research. How the bishops shaped and promoted spiritual discourse to establish their own authority within society is key. This is traced through the meagre textual sources which hint at the bishops' involvement in the wider flow of ecclesiastical politics in Britain and through the archaeological and landscape evidence for churches and minsters held not only by bishops but also by kings and aristocrats within the diocese. Saints' cults offer a particularly effective medium through which to study these developments. St Chad, the Mercian bishop who established the see at Lichfield, became an influential spiritual patron for subsequent bishops of the diocese but other lesser-known saints also focused c. Burton Dassett Southend, Warwickshire. Nicholas Palmer, Jonathan Parkhouse, 2023-02-01. Southend, one of five medieval settlements in Burton Dassett parish, Warwickshire, was the site of a market promoted by the manorial lord Bartholomew de Sudeley, with a charter being obtained in 1267. The settlement prospered, becoming known as Chipping Dassett, and approached urban status but then declined throughout the 15th century. It was subjected to depopulation in 1497. The site survived as earthworks in pasture until construction of the M40 motorway necessitated the archaeological programme described here. The only building to survive was the 13th-century chapel of St James, reduced along with an adjacent post-medieval priest's house to a cow shed. Open area excavations at Southend investigated parts of ten medieval properties. There was some prehistoric and Romano-British activity with evidence for woodland regeneration and subsequent clearance in the post-Roman period, despite the Feldon area being one often considered to have little in the way of tree cover since the Roman period. The main period of occupation lasted from the mid-13th century to the late 15th century, reflecting the rise and decline of Chipping Dassett. Over 20 complete plans of houses and outbuildings were recorded, exhibiting a range of building techniques. The remains were well preserved, the surviving stratigraphy protected by demolition rubble. In most houses, successive building phases were revealed and many internal features survived. A door jamb inscribed with the name of a tenant family, Gormand, suggests a degree of functional literacy. One of the properties was recognised as a smithy during the excavation, and a pioneering sampling and analysis of the ironworking evidence was carried out. The site was also sampled extensively for charred plant remains and, unusually for Warwickshire with its slightly acid soils, a large assemblage of animal bone was collected. Work on these provides direct evidence of medieval agricultural practice to be compared with the local historical evidence. The large quantities of finds recovered probably the largest assemblage from a medieval rural settlement in the West Midlands, enable the reconstruction of the material culture of a late medieval Warwickshire Feldon village Although the excavated area lay away from the original settlement nucleus the investigation revealed the mechanics of 13th century market development with two separate stages of planned development apparent After the mid 14th century the tenements show a complex pattern of decline leading up to the depopulation of 1497 The different properties followed varying development paths and the excavations chart a process of general community decline against a background of increasing individual prosperity The evidence of material culture and settlement morphology taken together are relevant to the discussion about differentiation and similarities between urban and rural settlement The medieval pottery has been crucial to the development of the Warwickshire type series Identification of the pottery sources provides evidence for trade connections between the settlement and the wider market network with the quantities of material from the Chilvers Coton kilns suggesting that manorial connections with North Warwickshire where the Sudeley family also held land were significant The summary narrative and thematic discussions focused upon material culture spatial organisation buildings and economy in this volume are supplemented by detailed stratigraphic description and specialist reports available online through the Archaeology Data Service
