

MYSTICISM, SACRED AND PROFANE

R. C. Zaehner, professor of oriental religions and ethics at the University of Oxford, is well-known for his researches in the field of Iranian traditions, Zurvanism, Manicheism etc. By these researches he has been led to discriminate real spiritual communion from its outward appearances and its accompanying human sensations, so as to raise the moral issue of transcendental experience vs. its counterfeit, i.e. all human attempts at a travesty of the real thing under false pretences.

In his recent work Mysticism, Sacred and Profane: An inquiry into some varieties of Praternatural Experience (Oxford, Clarendon Press, 1957, pp. XVIII-256) Zaehner probes deep into some items of modern psychologic experience in the light of the comparative history of religions. The immediate occasion for his book has been provided by Aldous Huxley's well-known work The doors of perception, which Zaehner seems to take as the standard of human faking of supersensible experience. He looks at it as one of the outstanding documents of our age and weighs it on the scales of critical thought and mystical Christianity.

Aldous Huxley is one of those typically modern intellectuals who, unwilling to give up either trying to understand Man's fundamental problems or applying agnosticism's peculiar methods in doing so, are going to any lengths to bring about a solution to them in keeping with the times — that is, positivistic, oversimplified and untraditional. He is certainly known to the reader not only as a writer of celebrated novels but also (Time must have a stop) as a thinker ready to grapple with such problems as survival after death and the pattern of a mystical life adapted to our times — and all this with the spirit of a child of his own age, unwilling to forfeit any of the whims, any of the vitalistic, naturalistic and materialistic fads of today's mentality. Obviously a self-contradictory attitude.

Zaehner remarks in this connection that mysticism cannot be aimed at with an essentially anti-mystical mentality. Self-discipline in inner life may be rooted in self-consciousness, Man's present achievement, and be the more intense and creative. But then this self-consciousness must consist in inner freedom, in spiritual activity in which man is independent of any support of a sensible nature.

In The doors of perception Aldous Huxley shows the typical attitude of a spirit substantially bound to the outward awareness of
