Stojković, 2019-01-22 English for Specific Purposes ESP has accumulated substantial tradition in practice research and theory. It is a common approach in English Language Teaching (ELT) among adults today, starting with high schools, then in academia, pre and in service training and life long learning programs. The role of ESP in each of these is to facilitate work in today's inevitably international business and scientific environment. It provides language training based on the precise simulation of communicative situations found in the surroundings for which learners are preparing, including for example domain specific vocabulary, syntactic and morphological structures, text and speech content structuring, stylistics, intercultural competence. At present, when English is present either as a foreign or second language learning, General English (GE) is to a large degree accomplished before learners start needing English for their jobs. In this way, ESP does not complete GE but builds upon the foundations laid by it in learners' prior education. ESP is a channel of communication for the contemporary academia and economics. However, even so, these are still early days for ESP as it does not yet have a recognised place within academia. Only very recently have we begun to witness the occasional but encouraging emergence of ESP academic courses and departments. This book thus explores practice and research conducted and under way in this field of ELT in order to assist its recognition as an autonomous academic discipline.

Using Words and Things Mark Coeckelbergh, 2017-06-26 This book offers a systematic framework for thinking about the relationship between language and technology and an argument for interweaving thinking about technology with thinking about language. The main claim of philosophy of technology is that technologies are not mere tools and artefacts, not mere things, but crucially and significantly shape what we perceive, do, and are. It is rethought in a way that accounts for the role of language in human technological experiences and practices. Engaging with work by Wittgenstein, Heidegger, McLuhan, Searle, Ihde, Latour, Ricoeur and many others, the author critically responds to and constructs a synthesis of three extreme idealtype untenable positions: 1. only humans speak and neither language nor technologies speak; 2. only language speaks and neither humans nor technologies speak; and 3. only technology speaks and neither humans nor language speak. The construction of this synthesis goes hand in hand with a narrative about subjects and objects that become entangled and constitute one another. Using Words and Things thus draws in central discussions from other subdisciplines in philosophy, such as philosophy of language, epistemology and metaphysics, to offer an original theory of the relationship between language and philosophy of technology centered on use, performance and narrative, and taking a transcendental turn.
