

PRINCIPLES OF MICROECONOMICS – CONSUMER BEHAVIOUR THEORY– CONSUMER EQUILIBRIUM

Consumer equilibrium is a situation where a consumer spends his given income purchasing one or more commodities so that he achieves maximum satisfaction and has no urge to change this level of consumption, given the prices of commodities.

When consumers make choices about the quantity of goods and services to consume, it is presumed that their objective is to maximize their overall utility or satisfaction.

In trying to maximize their total utility, the consumer faces certain constraints, the most common of which are the consumer's income and the prices of goods and services.

The law of diminishing marginal utility states that as the consumer consumes an additional unit of a commodity, the utility derived from the commodity decreases. Also, by purchasing more units of a commodity, the consumer's income decreases.

Therefore, a rational consumer must balance his spending in such a way that he gains maximum satisfaction from spending a minimum (or the total) amount of income.
