Making Of Europe An Introduction To The History Of European Unity:

The Making of Europe Christopher Dawson, 2002 Christopher Dawson concludes that the period of the fourth to the eleventh centuries commonly known as the Dark Ages is not a barren prelude to the creative energy of the medieval world. Instead, he argues that it is better described as ages of dawn for it is in this rich and confused period that the complex and creative interaction of the Roman empire, the Christian Church, the classical tradition, and barbarous societies provided the foundation for a vital unified European culture. In an age of fragmentation and the emergence of new nationalist forces, Dawson argued that if our civilization is to survive, it is essential that it should develop a common European consciousness and sense of historic and organic unity. But he was clear that this unity required sources deeper and more complex than the political and economic movements on which so many had come to depend, and he insisted prophetically that Europe would need to recover its Christian roots if it was to survive. In a time of cultural and political ambiguity, the making of Europe is an indispensable work for understanding not only the rich sources but also the contemporary implications of the very idea of Europe.

Excerpt from The Making of Europe: An Introduction to the History of European Unity

The art of the catacombs is the first outward manifestation of Christian culture and shows in a remarkable way how the external forms of the old Roman Hellenistic culture were assimilated and modified by the new spiritual forces. Early Christian art took over the traditional commonplaces of the Hellenistic house decorator and infused them with a profound spiritual meaning. The subjects are mere generalised types or symbols: a fish, a dove, or a figure borrowed from heathen mythology, the value of which consists entirely in their hieratic and mystical significance to the initiated. Of these figures the most popular is that of a woman in an attitude of prayer, the orans, a figure that symbolised at once the soul of the deceased, the freed and enlightened spirit of man, and also the Virgin Church, the Bride of the Spirit. The Philosophy of Japanese Wartime Resistance David Williams, 2014-04-16 The transcripts of the three Kyoto School roundtable discussions of the theme of the standpoint of world history and Japan may now be judged to form the key source text of responsible Pacific War revisionism Published in the pages of Chuo Koron the influential magazine of enlightened elite Japanese opinion during the twelve months after Pearl Harbor these subversive discussions involved four of the finest minds of the second generation of the Kyoto School of philosophy Tainted by controversy and shrouded in conspiratorial mystery these transcripts were never republished in Japan after the war and they have never been translated into English except in selective and often highly biased form David Williams has now produced the first objective balanced and close interpretative reading of these three discussions in their entirety since 1943 This version of the wartime Kyoto School transcripts is neither a translation nor a paraphrase but a fuller rendering in reader friendly English that is convincingly faithful to the spirit of the original texts The result is a masterpiece of interpretation and inter cultural understanding between the Confucian East and the liberal West Seventy years after Tojo came to power these documents of the Japanese resistance to his wartime government and policies exercise a unique claim on students of Japanese history and thought today because of their unrivalled revelatory potential within the vast literature on the Pacific War The Philosophy of Japanese Wartime Resistance may therefore stand as the most trenchant analysis of the political philosophic and legal foundations of the place of the Pacific War in modern Japanese history yet to appear in any language

A Historian and His World Christina Scott,2023-03-17 The English historian of culture Christopher Dawson 1889 1970 was an independent scholar and the author of more than twenty books He served as assistant lecturer in the History of Culture University College Exeter 1925 Forwood Lecturer in the Philosophy of Religion University of Liverpool 1934 Gifford Lecturer at the University of Edinburgh 1947 1949 and as Professor of Catholic Studies at Harvard University 1958 1962 He was elected Fellow of the British Academy in 1943 and edited the Dublin Review during the Second World War This biography by Christina Scott Dawson s daughter is a sensitive portrait of a complex and fascinating scholar Unlike other English Christian converts of the twentieth century who excelled in literature like G K Chesterton or C S Lewis Dawson turned to the social sciences He drew from the new idea of culture as a common way of life emerging from anthropology at the time of the Great War to shape a new approach to history His study of the intimate relationship between religion and culture throughout world history shaped his trenchant criticisms of his own times He wrote in 1955 that the first step in the transformation of culture is a change in the pattern of culture within the mind for this is the seed out of which there spring new forms of life which ultimately change the social way of life and thus create a new culture Dawson s engagement with anthropology and the idea of culture marked an important moment of development in the Catholic intellectual tradition Christina Scott shows that Dawson is best understood as he himself interpreted his historical subjects in the context of the spiritual world in which he lived the ideas that moved him and the faith that inspired his action Dawson was not a historian of ideas for their own sake he had a passionate belief in their liberating power A Historian and His World will be of interest to intellectual historians historians of religion and culture and students of modern Catholic thought The Introduction is written by Dawson scholar Joseph T Stuart and the book is graced by a postscript by Christopher Dawson reflecting upon the meaning of his work

Barbarian Queens and the Conversion of Europe Burnam W. Reynolds, 2024-11-19 The conversion of the Roman Empire to Christianity occurring in the golden glint of the sunset of the Ancient World was not a concluding chapter but an opening one The sequential conversion of the barbarian tribal invaders of the Empire and the subsequent conversion of those beyond the old imperial limes was the making of European culture a prototypical Christendom The process has been well studied from the perspective of kings popes and missionaries by some of the finest historians of our era But the missing component in this civilizational change is that of the decisive influence of barbarian queens Christian women who led their royal husbands in the dangerous journey from one religion to another In recent years much has been done to illuminate queenship in general but a study focusing specifically on the queen's role in conversion is lacking This book seeks to remedy that and provide a missing piece in women's history
