The Archaeology of Town Creek Edmond A. Boudreaux, III, 2007-11-04 Provides new insights into the community pattern and leadership roles at a major Mississippian archaeological site The sequence of change for public architecture during the Mississippian period may reflect a centralization of political power through time In the research presented here some of the community level assumptions attributed to the appearance of Mississippian mounds are tested against the archaeological record of the Town Creek site the remains of a town located on the northeastern edge of the Mississippian culture area In particular the archaeological record of Town Creek is used to test the idea that the appearance of Mississippian platform mounds was accompanied by the centralization of political authority in the hands of a powerful chief A compelling argument has been made that mounds were the seats and symbols of political power within Mississippian societies While platform mounds have been a part of Southeastern Native American communities since at least 100 B C around A D 400 leaders in some communities began to place their houses on top of earthen mounds an act that has been interpreted as an attempt to legitimize personal authority by a community leader through the appropriation of a powerful traditional community oriented symbol Platform mounds at a number of sites were preceded by a distinctive type of building called an earthlodge a structure with earth embanked walls and an entrance indicated by short parallel wall trenches Earthlodges in the Southeast have been interpreted as places where a council of community leaders came together to make decisions based on consensus In contrast to the more inclusive function proposed for pre-mound earthlodges it has been argued that access to the buildings on top of Mississippian platform mounds was limited to a much smaller subset of the community If this was the case and if ground level earthlodges were more accessible than mound summit structures then access to leaders and leadership may have decreased through time Excavations at the Town Creek archaeological site have shown that the public architecture there follows the earthlodge to platform mound sequence that is well known across the

South Appalachian subarea of the Mississippian world The clear changes in public architecture coupled with the extensive exposure of the site s domestic sphere make Town Creek an excellent case study for examining the relationship among changes in public architecture and leadership within a Mississippian society Archaeological Perspectives on the Southern Appalachians Ramie A. Gougeon, Maureen Meyers, 2015-03-10 This volume demonstrates how archaeologists working in the Southern Appalachian region over the past 40 years have developed rich interpretations of prehistoric and historic Southeastern Native societies by examining them from multiple scales of analysis The end results of these examinations demonstrate both the uses and the constraints of multiscalar approaches in reconstructing various lifeways across the Southeast Architectural Variability in the Southeast Cameron H. Lacquement, 2007-10-28 Some of the most visible expressions of human culture are illustrated architecturally Unfortunately for archaeologists the architecture being studied is not always visible and must be inferred from soil inconsistencies or charred remains This study deals with research into roughly a millennium of Native American architecture in the Southeast and includes research on the variation of construction techniques employed both above and below ground Archeological Investigations at Shiloh Indian Mounds National Historic Landmark (40HR7) David G. The Archaeology of Houses and Households in the Native Southeast Benjamin A. Steere,2017-04-11 This book explores changes in houses and households in the southeastern United States from the Woodland to the Historic Indian Period ca 200 B C to A D 1800 Most studies of domestic architecture in the Southeast have been conducted at the single site scale As a result broader spatial and temporal patterns of variation in houses and households are not well understood To address this problem Steere constructed a database that catalogues the architectural features of 1 258 structures from 65 sites in the Southern Appalachian region and surrounding areas Significant trends identified by this comparative study include changes in the size and spacing of houses changes in architectural investment and a secular trend toward the increasing segmentation of houses Using a theoretical framework developed from household archaeology and anthropology Steere argues that certain aspects of this architectural variation can be explained by changes in household economics and household composition symbolic behavior status differentiation and settlement patterning More generally he proposes that large scale patterns of diachronic and synchronic variation in domestic architecture are best explained by changes in social organization Provided by publisher

The Archaeology of Events Zackary I. Gilmore,Jason M. O'Donoughue,2015-03-31 These perspectives are applied to a broad range of archeological contexts stretching across the Southeast and spanning more than 7 000 years of the region s pre Columbian history New data suggest that several of this region s most pivotal historical developments such as the founding of Cahokia the transformation of Moundville from urban center to vacated necropolis and the construction of Poverty Point s Mound A were not protracted incremental processes but rather watershed moments that significantly altered the long term trajectories of indigenous Southeastern societies In addition to exceptional occurrences that impacted entire communities or peoples Southeastern archaeologists are increasingly recognizing the historical importance of localized everyday events such as building a house crafting a pot or depositing shell

New Histories of Village Life at Crystal River Thomas J. Pluckhahn,Victor D. Thompson,2025-07-01 This volume explores how Native peoples of the Southeastern United States cooperated to form large and permanent early villages using the site of Crystal River on Florida s Gulf Coast as a case study

Religion and Politics in the Ancient Americas Sarah Barber,Arthur A. Joyce,2017-09-20 This exciting collection explores the interplay of religion and politics in the precolumbian Americas Each thought provoking contribution positions religion as a primary factor influencing political innovations in this period reinterpreting major changes through an examination of how religion both facilitated and constrained transformations in political organization and status relations Offering unparalleled geographic and temporal coverage of this subject Religion and Politics in the Ancient Americas spans the entire precolumbian period from Preceramic

Global Perspective Alan P. Sullivan,Deborah Irene Olszewski,2016-12-01 In Archaeological Variability and Interpretation in Global Perspective contributors illustrate the virtues of various ecological experimental statistical typological technological and cognitive social approaches for understanding the origins formation histories and inferential potential of a wide range of archaeological phenomena As archaeologists worldwide create theoretically inspired and methodologically robust narratives of the cultural past their research pivots on the principle that determining the origins and histories of archaeological phenomena is essential in understanding their relevance for a variety of anthropological problems. The chapters explore how the analysis of artifact assemblage and site distributions at different spatial and temporal scales provides new insights into how mobility strategies affect lithic assemblage composition, what causes unstable interaction patterns in complex societies, and which factors promote a sense of place in landscapes of abandoned structures. In addition, several chapters illustrate how new theoretical approaches and innovative methods promote reinterpretations of the regional significance of historically important archaeological sites such as Myrtos Pyrgos, Crete, Greece; Aztalan, Wisconsin, USA; Tabun Cave, Israel; and Casas Grandes, Chihuahua, Mexico. The studies presented in Archaeological Variability and Interpretation in Global Perspective challenge orthodoxy, raise research-worthy controversies, and develop strong inferences about the diverse evolutionary pathways of humankind using theoretical perspectives that consider both new information and preexisting archaeological data.

A Searing Wind W. Michael Gear, Kathleen O'Neal Gear, 2012-03-06. Ancient Complex Societies Jennifer C. Ross, Sharon R. Steadman, 2017-01-06. Ancient Complex Societies examines the archaeological evidence for the rise and functioning of politically and socially complex cultures in antiquity. Particular focus is given to civilizations exhibiting positions of leadership, social and administrative hierarchies, emerging and already developed complex religious systems, and economic differentiation. Case studies are drawn from around the globe, including Asia, the Mediterranean region, and the American continents. Using case studies from Africa, Polynesia, and North America, discussion is dedicated to identifying what complex means and when it should be applied to ancient systems. Each chapter attempts to not only explore the sociopolitical and economic elements of ancient civilizations but to also present an overview of what life was like for the later population within each system, sometimes drilling down to individual people living their daily lives. Throughout the chapters, the authors address problems with the idea of complexity, the incomparability of cultures, and the inconsistency of archaeological and historical evidence in reconstructing ancient cultures.
