Mixed Longitudinal Interdisciplinary Study Of Growth And Development:

A Mixed-longitudinal, Interdisciplinary Study of Growth and Development Birte Prahl-Andersen, Charles J. Kowalski, Paul Henri Johan Marie Heydendael, 1979 Amsterdam Growth and Health Longitudinal Study (AGAHLS) Han C. G. Kemper, 2004 A unique observational long term study In a long follow up period of 23 years about 600 teenagers were observed till their young adult age in order to investigate the longitudinal relationship between health and lifestyles considering physical activity diet smoking and alcohol consumption Longitudinal studies with a follow up lasting for a quarter of a century are very rare and the Amsterdam Growth and Health Longitudinal Study AGAHLS is indeed unique among them The focus is multidisciplinary and involves both physical and psychological determinants in relation to a wide range of health outcomes The multiple measurements were carefully standardized in nine waves of data collection thus producing a high quality data set which has been analyzed by the application of advanced statistical techniques The monograph provides not only an overview of 23 years of follow up it also summarizes over 200 scientific publications and 10 PhD theses This publication is especially recommended to investigators planning longitudinal research to health workers and to authorities who like to implement health promotional activities in their community Perspectives in Human Growth, Development and Maturation Parasmani Dasgupta, Roland Hauspie, 2013-03-14 One morning in 1969 out of the blue I received a letter which both distressed and astonished me It was from a Prof S R Das in Calcutta who requested me to accept for eventual analysis a mountain of anthropometric data he had accumulated as he was ill and did not expect to survive to analyse it himself The data provided the astonishment twenty two anthropometric characters recorded every six months or a year over a period of 14 years in a mixed longitudinal study of some 560 children aged six months to twenty years Most were in families with siblings also in the study and every child was measured every time by S R Das himself The archive was unique combining the personal anthropometry of R H Whitehouse in the Harpenden Growth Study and the family approach of the Fels Growth Study This was a study of which neither I nor anyone of my acquaintance had heard Even in India Prof Das work was scarcely known It turned out Das was a scholarly man quiet and unassuming absolutely committed to his Sarsuna Barisha Growth Study just the obverse of the professional showman Clearly this was not a request I could refuse although I already had in hand enough projects to occupy Siva himself Patterns of Growth and Development in the Genus Homo J. L. Thompson, G. E. Krovitz, A. J. Nelson, 2003-12-04 It is generally accepted that the earliest human ancestors grew more like apes than like humans today If they did so and we are now different when how and why did our modern growth patterns evolve This book focuses on species within the genus Homo to investigate the evolutionary origins of characteristic human patterns and rates of craniofacial and postcranial growth and development and to explore unique ontogenetic patterns within each fossil species Experts examine growth patterns found within available Plio Pleistocene hominid samples and analyse variation in ontogenetic patterns and rates of development in recent modern humans in order to provide a comparative context for fossil hominid studies Presenting studies of some of the newer juvenile fossil specimens and information on Homo antecessor this book will provide a rich data source with which anthropologists and evolutionary biologists can address the questions posed above

Applied Longitudinal Data Analysis for Epidemiology Jos W. R.

Twisk,2013-05-09 This book discusses the most important techniques available for longitudinal data analysis from simple techniques such as the paired t test and summary statistics to more sophisticated ones such as generalized estimating of equations and mixed model analysis A distinction is made between longitudinal analysis with continuous dichotomous and categorical outcome variables The emphasis of the discussion lies in the interpretation and comparison of the results of the different techniques The second edition includes new chapters on the role of the time variable and presents new features of longitudinal data analysis Explanations have been clarified where necessary and several chapters have been completely rewritten The analysis of data from experimental studies and the problem of missing data in longitudinal studies are discussed Finally an extensive overview and comparison of different software packages is provided This practical guide is essential for non statisticians and researchers working with longitudinal data from epidemiological and clinical studies

Schneiderman,2014-07-14 For a wide spectrum of scientists from biomedical and dental researchers to primatologists and physical anthropologists Emet Schneiderman offers the most accurate and up to date presentation of the normal growth of the lower facial skeleton in a primate species His study is based on a sample of thirty five captive rhesus monkeys whose facial growth was traced over a ten year period spanning from infancy to adulthood The author identifies the relative contribution of various sites of growth quantifies the relative roles of different types of development such as appositional and condylar and sheds light on several long standing controversies as to how the primate face grows Unlike many of the traditional cephalometric measurements the ones included in this work were chosen to reflect the positional dimensional and localized remodeling changes that occur during ontogeny Using a new statistical approach designed for longitudinal data Schneiderman avoids the misleading information that has often resulted from older cross sectional statistical methods This book serves as a foundation for future experimental and normal studies in the rhesus monkey and from a methodological standpoint as a general model for future longitudinal growth studies Originally published in 1992 The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print on demand technology to again make available previously out of print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905
