Model Identification and Adaptive Control Graham Goodwin, 2012-12-06 This book is based on a workshop entitled Model Identification and Adaptive Control From Windsurfing to Telecommunications held in Sydney Australia on December 16 2000 The workshop was organized in honour of Professor Brian BDO Anderson in recognition of his seminal contributions to systems science over the past 4 decades The chapters in the book have been written by colleagues friends and students of Brian Anderson A central theme of the book is the inter relationship between identification and the use of models in real world applications This theme has underpinned much of Brian Anderson's own contributions The book reflects on these contributions as well as making important statements about possible future research directions The subtitle of the book From Windsurfing to Telecommunications recognizes the fact that many common life experiences such as those we encounter when learning to ride a windsurfer are models for design methods that can be used on real world advanced technological control problems Indeed Brian Anderson extensively explored this link in his research work

Lagrangian and Hamiltonian Methods for Nonlinear Control 2003 A Astolfi, Francisco Gordillo, A J Van Der Schaft, 2003-10-07 This is the second of a series of IFAC Workshops initiated in 2000 The first one chaired and organized by Profs N Leonard and R Ortega was held in Princeton in March 2000 This proceedings volume looks at the role played by Lagrangian and Hamiltonian methods in disciplines such as classical mechanics quantum mechanics fluid dynamics electrodynamics celestial mechanics and how such methods can be practically applied in the control community Presents and illustrates new approaches to nonlinear control that exploit the Lagrangian and Hamiltonian structure of the system to be controlled Highlights the important role of Lagrangian and Hamiltonian Structures as design methods

Modeling, Identification and Control, 1984 Adaptation and Learning in Control and Signal Processing 2001 S. Bittanti, 2002-09-19 In control and signal processing adaptation is a natural tool to cope with real time changes in the dynamical behaviour of signals and systems In this area strongly connected with prediction and identification there has been an increasing interest in switching and supervising methods Moreover in recent years special attention has been paid to the ideas evolving round the theory of statistical learning as a potential tool of improved adaptation The IFAC workshop on Adaptation and Learning in Control and Signal Processing in 2001 gathered together experts in the field and interested researchers from universities and industry to present a full picture of the area This proceedings volume presents papers covering the following subjects Model reference and predictive control Multiple model control Adaptive control I II Adaptive control and learning Learning Adaptive control of nonlinear systems I II Supervisory control Neural networks for control PID design methods Sliding mode Adaptive filtering and estimation Identification methods I II The Identification Problem in Adaptive Control Systems S. L. Stott,1964 New Adaptation Methodologies Applied to Adaptive Control Systems and System Identification George Saikalis,2000 On the Feasibility of Adaptive Control Without Identification Iqleem, Muhammad Javed,1967 Application of Adaptive Techniques to Problems in Control and Communication K. S. Narendra,YALE UNIV NEW HAVEN CT SYSTEMS AND INFORMATION SCIENCES.,1982 It was decided at Yale in 1980 that the control problem should be reformulated with more realistic objectives allowing less restrictive assumptions to be made regarding the plant For example in many situations where the error between plant output and model output cannot be made to tend to zero asymptotically a reasonable objective would be to assure the boundedness of the output error as well as all the signals in the adaptive loop Such considerations eventually led to the study of bounded error adaptive control problems Plants with nonlinearities output disturbances and time varying parameters fall into this category The work that has been in progress during the past eighteen months at Yale is concerned with the development of procedures for stable identification and control of systems with various degrees of uncertainty Direct and indirect control techniques for systems with many control inputs and parameters are being investigated and methods of combining different techniques to obtain improved performance in practical applications are being examined
