Oxygen/Nitrogen Radicals: Cell Injury and Disease Val Vallyathan, Vince Castranova, Xianglin Shi, 2012-12-06 A veritable mountain of literature has been published showing the causal relationship of reactive oxygen/nitrogen species in human disease conditions, and there has been an explosion in the understanding of oxidative stress, the protective role of antioxidants, and molecular events involved in the regulation of transcription, editing, and translation of key events leading to disease processes. Strategies need to be developed for prevention of diseases by allowing scientists and clinicians to obtain information on new and emerging advances. The molecular mechanisms involved in several diseases, including Alzheimer's disease, atherosclerosis, diabetes, arthritis, and Parkinson's disease, as well as disorders of the eye, skin, cardiac, and pulmonary systems, are discussed in this volume along with scientific evidence supporting the value of dietary supplementation with antioxidants in the prevention of cellular damage leading to chronic disease. Special in vivo techniques are also discussed at length along with the role of molecular studies in human risk assessment.

Photosynthesis and the Environment N.R. Baker, 2006-07-06 Photosynthesis and the Environment examines how photosynthesis may be influenced by environmental changes. Structural and functional aspects of the photosynthetic apparatus are examined in the context of responses to environmental stimuli, particular attention being given to the processing of light energy by thylakoids, metabolic regulation, gas exchange, and source-sink relations. The roles of developmental and genetic responses in determining photosynthetic performance are also considered. The complexity of the responses to environmental change is demonstrated by detailed analyses of the effects of specific environmental variables light temperature water CO<sub>2</sub> ozone and UV B on photosynthetic performance Where appropriate attention is given to recent developments in the techniques used for studying photosynthetic activities The book is intended for advanced undergraduate and graduate students and a wide range of scientists with research interests in environmental effects on photosynthesis and plant productivity

Invisible, but how? The depth of unconscious processing as inferred from different suppression techniques. Julien Dubois, Nathan Faivre, 2015-02-09 To what level are invisible stimuli processed by the brain in the absence of conscious awareness It is widely accepted that simple visual properties of invisible stimuli are processed however the existence of higher level unconscious processing e g involving semantic or executive functions remains a matter of debate Several methodological factors may underlie the discrepancies found in the literature such as different levels of conservativeness in the definition of unconscious or different dependent measures of unconscious processing In this research topic we are particularly interested in yet another factor inherent differences in the amount of information let through by different suppression techniques In the same conditions of well controlled conservatively established invisibility can we show that some of the techniques in the psychophysical magic arsenal e g masking but also visual crowding attentional blink etc reliably lead to higher level unconscious processing than others e g interocular suppression Some authors have started investigating this question using multiple techniques in similar settings We argue that this approach should be extended and refined Indeed in order to delineate the frontiers of the unconscious mind using a contrastive method one has to disentangle the limits attributable to unawareness itself and those attributable to the technique inducing unawareness The scope of this research topic is to provide a platform for scientists to contribute insights and further experiments addressing this fundamental question
