Garth Stein bestselling author of The Art of Racing in the Rain In 1986 Henry Lee joins a crowd outside the Panama Hotel once the gateway to Seattle's Japantown. It has been boarded up for decades but now the new owner has discovered the belongings of Japanese families who were sent to internment camps during World War II. As the owner displays and unfurls a Japanese parasol Henry, a Chinese American, remembers a young Japanese American girl from his childhood in the 1940s, Keiko Okabe, with whom he forged a bond of friendship and innocent love that transcended the prejudices of their Old World ancestors. After Keiko and her family were evacuated to the internment camps, she and Henry could only hope that their promise to each other would be kept. Now forty years later, Henry explores the hotel's basement for the Okabe family's belongings and for a long lost object whose value he cannot even begin to measure. His search will take him on a journey to revisit the sacrifices he has made for family, for love, for country.

The Dare Pair L.L. Scully, 2015-03-10 I designed this series of books to address some of the problems that our children face in today's difficult world after finding a lack of books while raising my son that taught any lessons or dealt with any of the pertinent issues that our children deal with growing up. My hope is that this series will teach kids values and lessons in a way that they can relate to with a bit of humor and a good scary story. This first book touches on a number of subjects including as the title suggests first impressions or judging people by their looks as well as teasing, name calling, friendship, and the consequences of not following the rules. Parents may wish to discuss these issues more in depth with your children, perhaps including some of your own ideas or morals in the conversation. Hopefully, by the end of each book, the reader will walk away with the subtle teachings in mind to help see them through some of the difficult times faced by today's generation or at least give them something to think about that relates to their own individual lives.
