Hand, 2008-12-30 Statistical models attempt to describe and quantify relationships between variables. In the models presented in this chapter, there is a response variable, sometimes called the dependent variable, and at least one predictor variable, sometimes called the independent or explanatory variable. When investigating a possible cause and effect type of relationship, the response variable is the putative effect and the predictors are the hypothesized causes. Typically, there is a main predictor variable of interest; other predictors in the model are called covariates. Unknown covariates or other independent variables not controlled in an experiment or analysis can affect the dependent or outcome variable and mislead the conclusions made from the inquiry. Bock Velleman given the model p is the probability that a relationship is seen by mere chance. The smaller the p value, the more confident we can be that the pattern seen in the data is not random. In the type of models examined here, the R measures the proportion of the variation in the response variable that is explained by the predictors specified in the model. If R is close to 1, then almost all the variation in the response variable has been explained. This measure is also known as the multiple correlation coefficient. Statistical studies can be grouped into two types: experimental and observational.

Longman Science for AQA, 2006. The Copymaster Files CD-ROMs. The Copymaster File provides all the worksheets and other materials intended to be photocopied for student use. The following worksheets can be found in the Copymaster File: Target sheets. Each topic begins with a student target sheet. These provide students with a record of their own progress through the topic and help increase levels of confidence. Practical sheets and classwork sheets. Homework sheets for each topic at Foundation level and Higher level. Practice exam style tests. The CD-ROM that accompanies the Copymaster File includes six specimen multiple choice tiered tests, two each for biology, chemistry, and physics. Sample Investigative Skills Assignments (ISAs). Six sample ISAs are provided on the CD-ROM: two biology, two chemistry, and two physics. The assessment activities assess the How Science Works criteria in context of the specification topics.

Innovations in Science and Technology Education, 1990. Science GCSE, 2006. Inclusive and Accessible Secondary Science. Jane Essex, 2023-07-20. Drawing on extensive professional experience and detailed empirical evidence, this resource sets out an insightful, highly practical approach to teaching science to secondary-aged students with learning difficulties and other special educational or additional support needs. SEND ASN. The book explores the barriers that the secondary school science curriculum currently presents to those who do not learn in the expected way, before providing a wealth of practical strategies to help teachers in both specialist and mainstream settings to make science more accessible. Multiple science topics are covered in depth, including living and non-living matter, the periodic table, electrical energy, the solar system, the environment, and more. Each topic is supported by extensive teachers' notes outlining activities that will allow educational practitioners to enact the principles of accessibility in the classroom. With rich field notes and practical takeaways included to accompany key insights, this accessible book will provide science teachers at the secondary school level, as well as support staff and anyone aspiring to teach science to SEN/ASN learners, with the guidance and resources they need to make science education meaningfully inclusive

Issues in Science Teaching John Sears, Pete

Sorenson, 2005-08-18 Issues in Science Teaching covers a wide range of important issues which will interest teachers at all phases in the education system. The issues discussed include the nature and purposes of science education in a multicultural society including the idea of science for all, the role and purposes of investigational work in science education, assessment, curriculum progression and pupil attitudes to their science experience, supporting basic skills development in literacy, numeracy and ICT through science teaching, supporting cross curricular work through science teaching, taking account of individual differences including ability, special needs, learning style and the case for inclusion. The articles are strongly based on current research and are intended to stimulate and broaden debate among the readers. Written by practising science educators and teachers, this book offers new and interesting ways of developing science education at all levels.

Education under siege Peter Mortimore, 2013-09-23 At a time when education is considered crucial to a country's economic success, recent UK governments have insisted their reforms are the only way to make England's system world class. Yet pupils are tested rather than educated, teachers bullied rather than trusted and parents cast as winners or losers in a gamble for school places. Education under siege considers the English education system as it is and as it might be. In a highly accessible style, Peter Mortimore, an author with wide experience of the education sector both in the UK and abroad, identifies the current system's strengths and weaknesses. He concludes that England has some of the best teachers in the world but one of the most muddled systems. Challenging the government's view that there is no alternative, he proposes radical changes to help all schools become good schools. They include a system of schools receiving a fair balance of pupils who learn easily and those who do not, ensuring a more even spread of effective teachers as well as banning league tables, outlawing selection, opening up faith schools and integrating private schools into the state system. In the final chapter, he asks readers who share his concerns to demand that the politicians alter course. The book will appeal to parents, education students and teachers as well as everyone interested in the future education of our children.
