Lou", Vol. 9 Edward Payson Roe,2015-08-06 Excerpt from Miss Lou Vol 9 And Driven Back to Eden A great rudely built stone chimney was smoking languidly one afternoon Leaning against this chimney as if for protection and support was a little cabin gray and decrepit with age The door of the cabin stood wide open for the warm spring was well advanced in the South There was no need of a fire but Aun Jinkey the mistress of the abode said she kep hit bunin fer comp ny She sat by it now smoking as lazily as her chimney in an old chair which creaked as if in pain when she rocked She supposed herself to be in deep meditation and regarded her corncob pipe not merely a solace but also as an invaluable assistant to clearness of thought Aun Jinkey had the complacent belief that she could reason out most questions if she could only smoke and think long enough Unfortunately events would occur which required action or which raised new questions before she had had time to solve those originally presented yet it would be hard to fancy a more tranquil order of things than that of which she was a humble part The cabin was shaded by grand old oaks and pines through which the afternoon sun shone in mild radiance streaming into the doorway and making a broad track of light over the uneven floor But Aun Jinkey kept back in the congenial dusk oblivious to the loveliness of nature without At last she removed her pipe from her mouth and revealed her mental processes in words About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any
