Monitress Merle, Etc Angela Brazil, 1947 Monitress Merle (Esprios Classics) Angela Brazil, 2022-01-26 Angela Brazil 1868-1947 was the first of the British writers of modern School Girls Stories genre written from the characters' point of view Along with her sister Amy Angela then studied at Heatherley School of Fine Art in London She was quite late in taking up writing developing a strong interest in Welsh mythology and at first wrote a few magazine articles on mythology and nature It was possibly thanks to her sister Amy that she finally began work on a novel at the age of 35 Exceptionally with respect to many of her contemporaries writing in this vein Brazil did not write any books in a series each stood on its own with different characters every time These were considered to deal accurately and sympathetically with the highs and lows in the lives of middle class schoolgirls including the tangle of emotional friendships Her works include The New Girl at St Chad 1911 For the Sake of the School 1915 The Luckiest Girl in the School 1916 and The Jolliest School of All 1922

Monitress Merle Angela Brazil, 2021-01-23 The warm mellow September sunshine was streaming over the irregular roofs and twisted chimneys of the little town of Chagmouth and was glinting on the water in the harbour and sending gleaming straggling silver lines over the deep reflections of the shipping moored by the side of the jetty The rising tide lapping slowly and gently in from the ocean was floating the boats beached on the shingle and was gradually driving back the crowd of barefooted children who had ventured out in search of mussels and was sending them shrieking with mirth scampering up the seaweed-covered steps that led to the fish market On the crag top above the town the corn had been cut and harvesters were busy laying the sheaves together in stooks The yellow fields shone in the afternoon light as if the hill were crowned with gold Walking along the narrow cobbled path that led past the harbour and up on to the cliff Mavis and Merle looked at the scene around with that sense of rejoicing proprietorship with which we are wont to revisit the pet place of our adoption It was two whole months since they had been in Chagmouth and as they both considered the little town to be the absolute hub of the universe it was really a great event to find themselves once more in its familiar streets They had spent the summer holidays with their father and mother in the north and had come back to Durracombe just in time for the reopening of school On this first Saturday after their return to Devonshire they had motored with Uncle David to his branch surgery at Chagmouth and were looking forward to several hours of amusement while he visited his patients at the sanatorium Readers who have followed the adventures of Mavis and Merle Ramsay in A Fortunate Term will remember that the sisters on account of Mavis's health had come to live with their great uncle Dr Tremayne at Durracombe where they attended school daily at The Moorings Dr Ramsay their father had decided shortly to leave his practice at Whinburn and go into partnership with Dr Tremayne but the removal to Devonshire could not take place till nearly Christmas so the girls were to spend another term in sole charge of Uncle David Aunt Nellie and Jessop the elderly housekeeper an arrangement which though they were sorry to be parted from their parents pleased them uncommonly well It was a favourite excursion of theirs to accompany their uncle on Saturdays when he motored to visit patients at Chagmouth On these occasions they would have lunch and tea with him at Grimbals Farm where he had his surgery and would spend the intervening time on the seashore or wandering along the cliffs To day tempted by the brilliant sunshine they had brought their bathing costumes towels and tea basket and meant to secure the last dip of the holidays in case the weather should change and further mermaiding should prove impossible They chatted briskly as they climbed the path up the cliff
