From Monologue to Dialogue? Cohesive Interaction in Personal Weblogs, 2010 In the last decade computer mediated communication has emerged as a promising new field of research in linguistics One of its main objectives today is the generic description of novel Internet based forms of communication e g websites chats message boards While some of these forms have already been investigated in great detail others remain largely unexplored Especially the weblog is so far uncharted territory despite its growing impact in various social economic and political affairs This study hopes to close this gap in CMC research It provides the first exhaustive corpus based studies on one of the most pervasive weblog genres on the Internet personal weblogs The genre is not only analysed in its formal dimension but more importantly in its discursive cohesive scope To this end the distribution of various grammatical and lexical cohesive relations will be elicited both within and between weblogs As a result we gain a precise cohesive profile of personal weblogs that enables us to perform a contrastive analysis with cohesive profiles of prototypical spoken dialogues two party and three party conversations and written monologues academic articles To this end one is able to pinpoint more exactly the extent to which weblogs actually bridge websites and Internet chats Against popular opinion the results of the study evidence that personal weblogs are much more similar to written monologues than to spoken dialogues In fact they show that the cohesive interaction between weblog author s and user s is largely restricted to few recurring patterns This finding holds a number of important implications for the way we conceive of weblogs today

Disability in Dialogue Jessica M.F. Hughes, Mariaelena Bartesaghi, 2023-09-15 What would it mean to invite disability into dialogue Disability in Dialogue attunes us to the dialogues of and about disability In the pages of this book we ask readers to consider the dialogic constitution of disability and to imagine its reformulation We find the voices bodies social norms visceral experiences discourses and acts of resistance that materialize disability in all its dialogic and enfolded complexity tensions contradictions provocations frustrations and desires This volume makes a unique contribution bringing together authors from disciplines as diverse as communication dialogue studies psychology sociology design rhetoric and activism Because we take dialogue seriously this book is designed to be brave as we examine the ways of being in the world that dialogic practices engender and allow as well as beckon to continue By way of a variety of frameworks such as discourse analysis dialogue studies narrative analysis and critical approaches to discourse the chapters of this book take us through a polylogue of and about disability demanding that we consider our own roles in bringing forth disabled ways of being and how we might instead choose ways that enable our common existence

Clinical Professor Washington State University College of Nursing Theatre Theory Reader: Prague School Writings David Drozd, 2017-03-01 This is precisely the book I have been looking out for ever since working at my Das Drama Theorie und Analyse 1977 The Theory and Analysis of Drama 1988 and discovering from a few specimens the incisive usefulness and importance of Prague School theatre semiotics There is everything one could possibly wish for in this monumental Theatre Theory Reader Prague School Writings all the by now canonical texts and many others presented for the first time in English arranged in a systematic order which fully renders the sense of the scope and development of Czech theatre semiotics and all of them in highly competent translations aware of the terminological complexities at stake and supported by helpful annotations With such a rich harvest garnered this anthology of Prague School Writings is bound to become nationally as well as internationally a prime work of reference and give to them a second lease of life in the 21st century Manfred Pfister Modern theatre theory no matter what its orientation can trace its roots back to the structuralist and semiotic explorations of the Prague School in the early twentieth century This comprehensive and informed overview is therefore most welcome in understanding the course and development of that theoretical tradition It is not however of purely historical interest important as that is Whether they use the terminology of the Prague School or evoke the names of its contributors analysts of theatre and performance today still find the strategies and articulations of those pioneers of ongoing relevance This collection thus provides an important double service providing contemporary theatre scholars with a clearer idea of where they have come from and an inspiration for where they may be going Marvin Carlson I think it is a great idea not to group the articles according to the different authors but following a systematic that covers as many aspects of theatre as possible This way it becomes quite clear that the theories of the so called Prague or Czech structuralists and semioticians were able to apply their theories when discussing most diverging questions related to theatre The choice of texts is excellent It makes more than clear that these theories are not outdated do not only have historical value and are interesting with regard to the history of ideas only Rather it becomes evident that they are highly relevant in the context of discussions led today Erika Fischer Lichte The Prague School and the Czech structuralism have had a considerable impact on the development of semiotic studies and theatre studies at large in the 1960s and 70s But this has been quickly forgotten and with the rise of poststructuralism and deconstruction in the 80s and 90s they were not only neglected but also unjustly disregarded or even forgotten This is why the Theatre Theory Reader Prague School Writings is a very welcome book which comes at the right moment when postmodernism poststructuralism and postdramatic theatre seem to have lost their momentum as if the requirements of today's quest for a new way of living and of making business had become so strong that we must go back to the basics Structuralism and a critique of ideology are now back at least as a sign to not give up thinking and theorizing in a world which has become self centred and mad The afterword by Pavel Dr bek Martin Bern tek Andrea Jochmanov and Eva laisov is a sort of book within the book as it neatly puts in perspective all the important names and theories of the Prague

School It does this in a very user friendly manner where complex theories are summarized in a clear yet precise introduction This makes the reading of the different chapters easier and immediately connected to our contemporary way of thinking Patrice Pavis Playwriting Intensive Paul Castagno,2023-03-07 Playwriting Intensive takes a fresh approach to playwriting putting dialogue first Castagno shows novice playwrights how to use language to generate character and structure His decades of experience teaching and writing have resulted in a fresh informed pedagogy designed to get students off to the right start and progressing quickly Castagno emphasizes learning by process through the text encouraging readers to experiment and familiarize themselves with the best practices provided His lessons focus on the skills contemporary playwrights will use in their careers including promoting diversity both through featured examples and dedicated exercises
