Kingston, 2012-12-06 Innovation is the turning of ideas into concrete realities To the extent that this process is an economic one it must also be subject to political decisions and these determine which ideas are to have resources made available for their innovation This book attempts to trace the relationship between ideas resources and politics Chapter I deals with the way economic innovation depends both upon markets and upon interference with markets Schumpeter taught us how market power is essential for innovation This chapter stresses that the inverse is also true Innovation can take place wherever there is market power A most important corollary of this is that failure to develop any particular type of market power need not prevent innovation from happening It will then take place under the protection of whatever market power there is and it will be geographically located wherever that market power is effective Chapter II identifies and seeks to fill a major gap in the literature on innovation by showing how important modern marketing has become for providing the conditions under which money may be rationally invested at high risk to get new things done Marketing monopoly or Persuasive market power is now at least as important as the market power of Capability or as the several types of Specific market power in interference with market forces It is therefore equally important for innovation Catalog of Copyright Entries. and the most concentrated industries are more or less the same from one country to the other The studies of Prais Reid Jacquemin Philips and Linda likewise show that a broad trend toward concentration has been manifest Hearings, Reports and Prints of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary United States.
