

NANA

A woman with short dark hair, wearing a dark tank top and a black bag, is sitting on a low wooden stool at a small wooden table. She is looking down at a newspaper or magazine she is holding. On the table, there is a small black teapot and two small cups. The table is positioned in front of a large window with a grid pattern. The room has a warm, slightly aged feel with soft lighting. The overall style is that of a manga or anime illustration.

Patterns in Circulation Nina Sylvanus, 2016-12-07 In this book Nina Sylvanus tells a captivating story of global trade and cross cultural aesthetics in West Africa showing how a group of Togolese women through the making and circulation of wax cloth became influential agents of taste and history Traveling deep into the shifting terrain of textile manufacture design and trade she follows wax cloth around the world and through time to unveil its critical role in colonial and postcolonial patterns of exchange and value production Sylvanus brings wax cloth's unique and complex history to light born as a nineteenth century Dutch colonial effort to copy Javanese batik cloth for Southeast Asian markets it was reborn as a status marker that has dominated the visual economy of West African markets Although most wax cloth is produced in China today it continues to be central to the expression of West African women's identity and power As Sylvanus shows wax cloth expresses more than this global motion of goods capital aesthetics and labor it is a form of archive where intimate and national memories are stored always ready to
