Political Parties And Elections In The French Fifth Republic:

Political Parties and Elections in the French Fifth Republic J. R. Frears, 1977 The Government of the Fifth Republic J. A. Laponce, 1976 French Presidentialism and the Election of 1995 Lorna Milne, John Gaffney, 2018-12-21 First published in 1997 this volume examines the presidential elections one of the central events of the democratic process in France and arguably the main organising principle of French politics since 1962 provide an opportunity to assess the development of the regime More significantly they allow us to assess modifications to the office of president and to French Presidentialism which are both reflected in and affected by the electoral campaign and the elections themselves This book provides such an assessment with specific reference to the candidates issues and events of the 1995 Presidential elections

Political Parties in the European Community Stanley Henig, 2025-09-12 Political Parties in the European Community 1979 looks at the decision by the member governments of the European Community to proceed to the direct election of a European Parliament It provides a full survey of the parties of the nine EC states giving both information and analysis on political and electoral systems party systems philosophy and structure of major parties finances membership and organisation In addition it deals with the evolution of transnational groupings of parties both inside and outside the European Parliament and the concluding chapter places Europe's parties in the overall context of the political societies within which they operate

French Political Parties Under the Fifth Republic Frank Lee Wilson, 1982 Contemporary French Political Parties David Scott Bell, 1982 Transformation of the German Political Party System Christopher S. Allen, Larry Eugene Jones, 2001 Using German political parties as a prism with which to view institutional change this collection transcends a single country focus and places the German experience in a comparative and historical framework Evaluation the performance of the German parties and party system in dealing with problems of integration and legitimation common to all industrialized democracies it presents a sharp analysis of the effects and incompleteness of German unification Political Parties in Advanced Industrial Democracies Paul Webb, 2002-09-26 How relevant and vital are political parties in contemporary democracies Do they fulfill the functions that any stable and effective democracy might expect of them or are they little more than moribund anachronisms relics of a past age of political life now superseded by other mechanisms of linkage between state and society These are the central questions which this book aims to address through a rigorous comparative analysis of political parties operating in the world's advanced industrial democracies Drawing on the expertise of an impressive team of internationally known specialists the book engages systematically with the evidence to show that while a degree of popular cynicism towards them is often chronic though rarely acute parties have adapted and survived as organizations remodelling themselves to the needs of an era in which patterns of linkage and communication with social groups have been transformed This has enabled them to remain central to democratic systems especially in respect of the political functions of governance recruitment and albeit more problematically interest aggregation On the other hand the challenges they face in respect of interest articulation communication and participation have pushed parties into more marginal roles within Western political systems. The implications of these findings for democracy depend on the observer's normative and theoretical perspectives. Those who understand democracy primarily in terms of popular choice and control in public affairs will probably see parties as continuing to play a central role while those who place greater store by the more demanding criteria of optimizing interests and instilling civic orientations among citizens are far more likely to be fundamentally critical.

Comparative Politics is a series for students and teachers of political science that deals with contemporary issues in comparative government and politics. The General Editors are Max Kaase, Vice President and Dean of Humanities and Social Sciences, International University Bremen, and Kenneth Newton, Professor of Government at Southampton University. The series is published in association with the European Consortium for Political Research.

The Presidentialization of Politics Thomas Poguntke, Paul Webb, 2007-04-27

The Presidentialization of Politics shows that the politics of democratic societies is moving towards a presidentialized working mode even in the absence of formal institutional changes. These developments can be explained by a combination of long-term structural changes in modern politics and societies, contingent factors which fluctuate over time. While these contingent short-term factors relate to the personalities of office holders, the overall political agenda and the majority situation in parliament, there are several structural factors which are relatively uniform across modern nations. First, the internationalization of modern politics, which is particularly pronounced within the European Union, has led to an executive bias of the political process which has strengthened the role of political top elites vis-à-vis their parliamentary groups and/or their parties. Their predominance has been amplified further by the vastly expanded steering capacities of state machineries which have severely reduced the scope of effective parliamentary control. At the same time, the declining stability of political alignments has increased the proportion of citizens whose voting decisions are not constrained by long-standing party loyalties. In conjunction with the mediatization of politics, this has increased the capacity of political leaders to bypass their party machines and to appeal directly to voters. As a result, three interrelated processes have led to a political process increasingly moulded by the inherent logic of presidentialism: increasing leadership power and autonomy within the political executive, increasing leadership power and autonomy within political parties, and increasingly leadership-centred electoral processes. The book presents evidence for this process of presidentialization for 14 modern democracies, including the US and Canada. While there are substantial cross-national differences, the overall thesis holds that modern democracies are increasingly following a presidential logic of governance through which leadership is becoming more central and more powerful but also increasingly dependent on successful immediate appeal to the mass public. Implications for democratic theory are considered.

Confronting the Challenges and Prospects in the Creation of a Union of African States in the 21st Century E. Ike Udogu, 2010-02-19 Confronting the Challenges and Prospects in the Creation of a Union of African States in the 21st Century frames the discourse around the important issue of African unification against the backdrop of the region's political and economic marginalization Arguably the richest continent in the world in terms of its abundant untapped natural resources and human capital it still lags behind the other regions of the world developmentally Undeniably Africa is at the crossroads in this millennium within the context of the powerful events and effects of the New Globalization One of the central issues that academics and political actors interested in African development must tackle immediately is how to make the region politically and economically relevant in global affairs These objectives could be attained through continental amalgamation Accordingly this book debates and suggests inter alia strategies that might advance Africa's unification effort in order to provide the politico-economic clout needed to spur continental development Further it argues that such a Union of African States is critical for promoting the good political life for all Africans
