Policing The Fringe A Young Mounties Story:

When Grampa was a Mountie Charles Scheideman, 2014-07-01 When Grampa was a Mountie is the third book based on Charlie Scheideman's 27 years of police work in the Interior of BC. The first two, Policing the Fringe and Tragedy on Jackass Mountain, ranked high on the BC bestsellers lists for several months after their release. This book is again a collection of short stories, some are funny, some gruesome, and some just tell things the way they were. Some accounts reveal the physical and mental hardships a few RCMP members have suffered for their dedication to duty and their willingness to serve in spite of the obvious danger. Scheideman's goal in all three books has been to portray to later generations small town police life as closely as possible to the way things really were. The longest story, Fred Quilt Frame Up, is about two RCMP constables at Alexis Creek who were falsely accused of beating a First Nations elder to death. The conspiracy to discredit these policemen and the RCMP held tight for years until the key witness's deathbed confession. The original accusations became front page stories internationally. Scheideman's account sets out the facts that have not been public knowledge up to now. Hunger, Horses, and Government Men Shelley A. M. Gavigan, 2012-10-15 Scholars often accept without question that the Indian Act 1876 criminalized First Nations. Drawing on court files, police and penitentiary records, and newspaper accounts from the Saskatchewan region of the North West Territories between 1870 and 1905, Shelley Gavigan argues that the notion of criminalization captures neither the complexities of Aboriginal participation in the criminal courts nor the significance of the Indian Act as a form of law. This illuminating book paints a vivid portrait of Aboriginal defendants, witnesses, and informants whose encounters with the criminal law and the Indian Act included both the mediation and the enforcement of relations of inequality. Policing the Fringe Charles Scheideman, 2009-05-28 From the 1960s through the 1980s, RCMP Sergeant Charlie Scheideman spent much of his time patrolling the dark corners of the Interior of British Columbia where the citizens would meet the modern criteria for redneck if their veranda collapsed it would kill more than four dogs; they think harrass is two words and so on. Such places weren't much fun to police but they were full of characters, many of whom make their way into Charlie's entertaining book Policing the Fringe. We meet Walter and Wilbur, two Hixon hillbillies who went on a bender and decided it would be fun to stagger out onto the Cariboo Highway with a rifle and hold up passing cars, which worked well enough until they held up a motorhome from Alaska that turned out to be better armed than they were. We meet Petre, the hard working hermit who was cheated out of his savings by three slick talking mining promoters and waited to take his revenge with an axe. With wry humour and a policeman's eye for relevant detail, Scheideman recounts events that range from the ridiculous to the horrific to the tragic. Once he stopped a car in the Fraser Canyon driven by three normally responsible American fishermen who on this occasion were careening wildly from one guard rail to another. Their defence? They had failed to allow for the added kick of Canadian beer. His most searing memory was of waiting for the embers of a burned house to cool enough so he could retrieve the bodies of two small victims while in a nearby house party goes kept right on partying.

One of the most revealing accounts ever written about policing in small town Canada this book bristles with unforgettable stories about the author's 27 years working on the RCMP's front lines. It will give readers new respect for the men and women who patrol Canada's backroads both because of the extremely taxing work they do and the good spirit with which they do it. Policing the Fringe William Kelly, Nora Hickson Kelly, RCMP Millennium Projects, 1999 *Canadian Books in Print.
