

Public Policy Analysis

Ekene O. Odi

Introduction

THE experiences of American political scientists after the Second World War have called into question the historical and descriptive method of studying and analysing politics and political issues, and brought into the fore the utility of an alternative approach. The decision-making approach to the study of politics, which grew after the war, thus expanded the scope of the study of politics and shifted attention from the focus on government and political institutions to emphasise on the decision-making processes which shape the behaviour of government and political institutions. This, therefore, popularised the study of public policy analysis as a distinct field in political science.

What is intended in this chapter is to provide an understanding to the study of public policy by answering the following pertinent questions: What is public policy? What is the utility of analysis in understanding the subject matter of public policy? How are policy decisions made and in whose interest? Who are the actors in the policy decision processes? These important questions constitute the fulcrum of the nature, scope and processes of public policy making. They are also instructive in an attempt to answer the classical question of politics: "who gets what, when and how" (Lasswell, 1936).

Politics, Administration and Public Policy

From the foregoing comments, we could establish a persuasive interconnection among the subject matters of politics, public administration and public policy. Politics, we should note, concerns itself with what David Easton calls the authoritative allocation of values in a political system. Values, to Sambo (1999: 281), are the things people desire and pursue with a fair amount of intensity. Values represent the aggregate interests and pursuits of individuals and groups of individuals which define the reason of their existence in the society. Notably, values vary from one individual or group to another. What becomes an issue is the scarcity of resources to meet the various conflicting desires and interests of individuals and groups in the society which shifts the burden of allocation to politics, simply represented by government or what Easton also calls authority. The outcome of a legitimate political process could be referred to as public policy. The cumulative judgmental decision made by the authority in allocating values, which of course may be favourable to some and unfavourable to others, is what Sambo conceives as public policy (1999: 282). The conflicts arising from the processes are also resolved through the mechanism of politics.

In the same vein, public administration ensures the implementation of the values allocated. This includes ensuring that such wealth, rights and duties are distributed to individuals and groups in the society. It is imperative, therefore, to make decisions concerning strategies,
