The European Voter Jacques Thomassen,2005-07-28 This book provides a systematic comparative analysis of how and why voting behaviour has changed in Europe in recent decades It has been widely argued that radical changes have occurred in the how and why of voting behaviour in Europe as a result of changes in the structure of society most notably the rise in material affluence and educational attainment and the decline in religious observance and the size of the working class But most tests of this proposition have been undertaken on single countries This book however systematically tests the validity of this proposition across various European countries The argument that social change has altered voting behaviour has been increasingly challenged on the grounds that it takes too little account of changes in the choices that are put before voters by the parties such as the promises and proposals that are put forward at election time This book therefore also assesses the relative explanatory power of claims that voting behaviour has changed because of changes in society against claims that it responds to changes in the offerings of political parties And it is clear from the analyses reported in this book that contrary to the claims of much of the extant literature the latter argument appears better able to account for many of the patterns and changes in European voting behaviour and thus the book constitutes an important challenge to much current academic orthodoxy This is the first book to provide a systematic comparison of the long term dynamics of the voting behaviour of individual voters across such a wide range of European countries taking into account the dynamics of the choices put before voters by the parties and for the first time relating this to the way voters behave Comparative Politics is a series for students and teachers of political science that deals with contemporary issues in comparative government and politics The General Editors are Max Kaase Professor of Political Science Vice President and Dean School of Humanities and Social Science International University Bremen and Kenneth Newton Professor of Comparative Politics University of Southampton The series is published in association with the European Consortium for Political Research

Human Rights and Diversity David P. Forsythe, Patrice C. McMahon, 2003-01-01 The development and study of human rights have increased significantly over time and have seen an intensified interest at the dawn of the twenty-first century. Much can be learned about the status of universal human rights by approaching the subject from regional perspectives. These diverse vantage points shed new light on the importance and complexity of the issues. David P. Forsythe and Patrice C. McMahon have brought together a collection of essays from top scholars in their fields. Each essay examines how a region as defined by geography or culture affects the standards and practice of human rights in a particular area. The issues discussed include human rights and child labor in South Asia, women's rights in Muslim states, the prospects and challenges of human rights in the Middle East, the role of women and tradition in Africa, and accommodating diversity in Europe. The collection also includes essays commenting on the parameters and intersections of international human rights in relation to area studies.

Institutional Legacies, Decision Frames and Political Violence in Rwanda and Burundi Stacey Mitchell, 2018-10-09 Rwanda and Burundi are strikingly similar countries that underwent democratization in the early 1990s. In both, resistance to democratic reforms led to coups d'état and presidential assassinations. A conundrum arises in terms of what transpires next. In Rwanda, total genocide was perpetrated by extremist Hutu actors, including government officials, upon the country's Tutsi and politically moderate Hutu populations. In Burundi, the coup d'état failed and instead ushered in a lengthy period of civil war. This divergence in outcome is puzzling given the similarity of these two countries, and it is not adequately explained by studies that address collective violence in each. This book utilizes an integrative approach that facilitates the formation of an explanation that more fully accounts for variation in the type of collective violence that occurred in Rwanda and Burundi. Showing that political actors during periods of major institutional change do not all respond to or perceive reform in the exact same manner or in a necessarily rational manner, this book makes an important contribution to the literature on ethnic conflict, collective violence, and democratization in Africa.
