Futurevision Howard F. Didsbury, Jr., 1996 Futurevision represents a new stage in the evolution of near term research and speculation into the world of tomorrow This volume which brings together twenty five leading experts in a variety of social and scientific areas attempts to foresee likely harmful or undesirable results of advances in scientific and technological ingenuity. In developing an early warning system designed to elicit prudent reflection and timely action, futurism has now entered the mainstream of social thought. The volume is divided into eight categories: the future of work, education, management, sustainability, projections about the future, decline or revitalization, medical ethics, and the global scene, as such. Among the major issues taken up are the threat of persistent technological unemployment in high-tech societies, approaches to teaching about the future, new forms of specialization and speculation, virtual learning in simulated contexts, planning models in business and industry that permit rapid shifts, changes in the economy that result from a move from a product to a service-based economy, patterns of innovation in agriculture using less space to feed more people, and the general analysis of forecasting and predicting future events with present methodologies. Futurevision aims to recast the basic fault lines of current social, scientific, and technological analysis. The volume emphasizes long-term perspectives, future-relevant research, and thinking, weapons analysis, and warfare, population, and planetary exploration, examining what constitutes significant knowledge in this new environment and the broad area of learning and caring in meaningful contexts. There is a new seriousness in future research that will be appealing to students and teachers and researchers of sociology, psychology, and economics, especially those working with current data and qualitative research techniques.

Policy Coherence in Development Co-operation Jacques Forster, Olav Schram Stokke, 2013-09-13. In the 1990s a shared conviction emerged among aid donors that their policies should be more coherent. Development Centre Studies: Public Attitudes and International Development Co-operation North-South Centre of the Council of Europe, OECD, 1998-11-20. A serious lack of adequate knowledge about The Right to Development and International Economic Law Isabella D Bunn, 2012-03-01. The United Nations is commemorating the 25th anniversary of the 1986 Declaration on the Right to Development, which proclaimed the right to be an inalienable human right by virtue of which every human person and all peoples are entitled to participate in, contribute to, and enjoy economic, social, cultural, and political development in which all human rights and fundamental freedoms can be realized. The UN now aims to mainstream the right into its policies and operational activities and is reviewing prospects for an internationally binding legal instrument. The evolution of the right to development, however, has been dominated by debates about its conceptual validity and practical ramifications. It has been hailed as the cornerstone of the entire human rights system and criticized as a distracting ideological initiative. Questions also persist about the role of the right in reforming the international economic order. This book examines the legal and moral foundations of the right to development, addressing the major issues. It then considers the right to development in the global economy noting the challenges of globalization and identifying key principles such as differential treatment of developing countries participation and accountability It relates the right to broad objectives such as the Millennium Development Goals the human rights based approach to development and environmental sustainability Implications for international economic law and policy in the areas of trade development finance and corporate responsibility are assessed The conclusion looks to the legal and ethical contributions and limitations of the right to development in this new context With an academic and professional background in international law human rights and moral theology the author brings a unique interdisciplinary focus to this timely project
