C. Gould,Robert S. Cohen,2012-12-06 The essays collected here in honor of Marx Wartofsky s sixty fifth birthday are a celebration of his rich contribution to philosophy over the past four decades and a testimony to the wide influence he has had on thinkers with quite various approaches of their own His diverse philosophical interests and main themes have ranged from constructivism and realism in the philosophy of science to practices of representation and the creation of artifacts in aesthetics and from the development of human cognition and the historicity of modes of knowing to the construction of norms in the context of concrete social critique Or again in the history of philosophy his work spans historical approaches to Hegel Feuerbach and Marx as well as contemporary implications of their work and in applied philosophy problems of education medicine and new technologies Marx s philosophical theorizing moves from the highest levels of abstraction to the most concrete concern with the everyday and with contemporary social and political reality And perhaps most notably it is acutely sensitive to the importance of historical development and social practice As a student of John Herman Randall Jr and Ernest Nagel at Columbia Marx developed an exemplary background in both the history of philosophy and systematic philosophy and subsequently combined this with a wide acquaintance with analytic philosophy He is at once aware of the requirements of system and of the need for rigorous and careful detailed argument

Self Love and Christian Ethics Darlene Fozard Weaver, 2002-10-17 Self love is an inescapable problem for ethics yet much of contemporary ethics is reluctant to offer any normative moral anthropologies Instead secular ethics and contemporary culture promote a norm of self realization which is subjective and uncritical Christian ethics also fails to address this problem directly because it tends to investigate self love within the context of conflicts between the self s interests and those of her neighbors Self Love and Christian Ethics argues for right self love as the solution of proper self relation that intersects with love for God and love for neighbor Darlene Fozard Weaver explains that right self love entails a true self understanding that is embodied in the person s concrete acts and relations In making this argument she calls upon ethicists to revisit ontological accounts of the self and to devote more attention to particular
