

KNOW THE RISKS OF MARIJUANA

Growing Use and Declining Perception of Risk

Prevalence: Marijuana is the most commonly used illegal substance in the U.S., and its use is growing.

Despite this increase, the perception of how harmful marijuana use can be is declining. More young people today do not consider marijuana use to be risky behavior.

Increased Usage: There is a noticeable rise in marijuana use among all adult age groups, both sexes, and pregnant women.

Real Risks of Marijuana Use

01

Youth & Young Adults

There are significant risks for young people. Marijuana use during adolescence can interfere with brain development and lead to long-term cognitive issues. Additionally, those who start using marijuana before age 18 are more likely to develop an addiction.

02

Pregnant or Nursing Women

Marijuana use during pregnancy can harm fetal development, leading to complications such as low birth weight, premature birth, and developmental issues. THC and other chemicals can also be passed to babies through breast milk, affecting their growth and development.

03

Stronger Marijuana

Today's marijuana is stronger than ever before, with higher levels of THC, the psychoactive component. This increases the risk of addiction and other health issues.

THE STATISTICS

1 in 10

people who use marijuana will become addicted.

When marijuana use begins before age 18, the rate of addiction rises to 1 in 6

Negative Effects of Use

Brain Health & Loss of IQ

Studies show that marijuana can cause a permanent loss of up to 8 IQ points when use begins at a young age. These IQ points do not return, even after quitting marijuana.

Psychological Impact

Research links marijuana use to mental health issues, including depression, anxiety, suicidal thoughts, and psychotic episodes. It is not clear if marijuana causes these conditions, but there is a strong association.

Impaired Ability

Marijuana affects timing, movement, and coordination, which can harm athletic performance and increase the risk of injuries.
