Fabbri, 2012-12-06 Human clustering in coastal areas The coastal zone has gained a solid reputation as a place vocated for recreational activities and this is generally related to the presence of the sea The relationship however does not appear univocal or simple the sea can be perceived as a hostile element by humans and the more general question of whether the presence of the shore is in itself a favourable repulsive or irrelevant factor to settlement is a debatable point at least for pre industrial societies Back in the early part of the 19th century Friedrich Hegel regarded oceans and rivers as unifying elements rather than dividing ones thus implying a trend towards the concentration of human settlements along them The sea he wrote stimulates 1 courage and conquest as well as profit and plunder although he realized that this did not equally apply to all maritime peoples In Hegel s view different approaches to the sea were mainly the results of cultural factors and in fact he recognized that some people living in coastal areas perceive the sea as a dangerous and alien place and the shore as aftnis terrae      Out of the Blue John H. Jameson, Della A. Scott-Ireton, 2007-04-15 While there are several books in the field of preservation and heritage protection for terrestrial archaeology there are very few resources for archaeologists working with maritime and submerged cultural heritage This book brings together state of the art ideas research and scholarship associated with maritime public education and interpretation It will add to a limited body of knowledge in a field that is steadily growing
