Research And The Ageing Population:

Research and the Ageing Population David Evered, Julie Whelan, 1988-02-24 A collection of papers focusing on the contribution biomedical research can make to the provision of proper health care for the elderly both in industrialized and in developing societies

Human Factors Research Needs for an Aging Population National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Board on Human-Systems Integration, Committee on Human Factors, Panel on Human Factors Research Issues for an Aging Population, 1990-02-01 This book describes the demographic sociological and ecological background of the aging society identifies human factors problems associated with aging summarizes currently relevant information and recommends directions for research It suggests a program of research and technology development for the purpose of ameliorating the effects of functional changes that accompany the aging process and provides a basis for additional research and application of human factors engineering data to the design of environments in which aging people must function

Improving Data on America's Aging Population National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Commission on Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on National Statistics, 1996-12-20 The Committee on National Statistics and the Committee on Population at the request of the NIA convened a workshop in March 1996 to discuss data on the aging population that address the emerging and important social economic and health conditions of the older population The purposes of the workshop were to identify how the population at older ages in the next few decades will differ from the older population today to understand the underlying causes of those changes to anticipate future problems and policy issues and to suggest future needs for data for research in these areas The scope of the workshop was broader than that of the 1988 CNSTAT report including not only data on health and long term care but also actuarial economic demographic housing and epidemiological data needs for informing public policy

Preparing for the Challenges of Population Aging in Asia Science Council of Japan, National Research Council, Indonesian Academy of Sciences, Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, 2011-01-08 Preparing for the Challenges of Population Aging in Asia discusses the challenges posed by a rapidly aging population and identifies needed research to help policymakers better respond to them While the percentage of elderly people in nearly every nation is growing this aging trend is particularly stark in parts of Asia Projections indicate that the portion of the population age 65 and older will more than triple in China India and Indonesia and more than double in Japan between 2000 and 2050 based on data from the United Nations Moreover this demographic shift is coinciding with dramatic economic and social changes in Asia including changing family structures and large scale migrations from rural to urban areas These trends raise critical questions about how nations can develop policies that best support health and economic well being in large and growing populations at older ages Governments in Asia still have time to determine the best ways to respond to the unfolding demographic transformation but taking advantage of this window of opportunity will require new research to shed light on the status and needs of the aging population Currently the research base on aging in this region is relatively underdeveloped This book identifies several key topics for research to inform public policy including changing roles in the family labor force participation income and savings and health and well being of the public Meeting the Challenge of an Ageing Population University of Southampton, Centre for Research on Ageing, Preparing for an Aging World National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on National Statistics, Committee on Population, Panel on a Research Agenda and New Data for an Aging World, 2001-06-26 Aging is a process that encompasses virtually all aspects of life Because the speed of population aging is accelerating and because the data needed to study the aging process are complex and expensive to obtain it is imperative that countries coordinate their research efforts to reap the most benefits from this important information Preparing for an Aging World looks at the behavioral and socioeconomic aspects of aging and focuses on work retirement and pensions wealth and savings behavior health and disability intergenerational transfers and concepts of well being It makes recommendations for a collection of new cross national data on aging populations data that will allow nations to develop policies and programs for addressing the major shifts in population age structure now occurring These efforts if made internationally would advance our understanding of the aging process around the world

The Aging Population in the Twenty-First Century National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Commission on Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on National Statistics, Panel on Statistics for an Aging Population, 1988-02-01 It is not news that each of us grows old What is relatively new however is that the average age of the American population is increasing More and better information is required to assess plan for and meet the needs of a graying population The Aging Population in the Twenty First Century examines social economic and demographic changes among the aged as well as many health related topics health promotion and disease prevention quality of life health care system financing and use and the quality of care especially long term care Recommendations for increasing and improving the data available as well as for ensuring timely access to them are also included Demography of Aging National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Commission on Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Population, 1994-02-01 As the United States and the rest of the world face the unprecedented challenge of aging populations this volume draws together for the first time state of the art work from the emerging field of the demography of aging The nine chapters written by experts from a variety of disciplines highlight data sources and research approaches results and proposed strategies on a topic with major policy implications for labor forces economic well being health care and the need for social and family supports

Singapore's Ageing Population Wing-Cheong Chan, 2011-05-25 A rapidly ageing population is the most significant demographic issue confronting Singapore in our lifetime This has created new and increasing demands on Singapore's healthcare system and on the families of the older adults The challenge is in providing a system of care that is humane effective and sustainable financially This requires coordination between state funded providers the family and the community This book offers a multi disciplinary perspective by researchers from various disciplines such as medicine sociology anthropology and law on managing healthcare and end of life decisions in Singapore Providing information and suggestions for better policy formulation towards the aged this book is an invaluable resource for policy makers service practitioners and scholars working on Asian gerontology

Research for Health Policy Erica Bell,2010 This A Z book aims to equip the reader with the practical knowledge skills and attitudes needed to deliver powerful research evidence for health policy makers in the government not for profit and private sectors It focuses on describing the genre of policy relevant research in a heuristic practice based way

Aging in Asia National Research Council,Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education,Committee on Population,Panel on Policy Research and Data Needs to Meet the Challenge of Aging in Asia,2012-07-31 The population of Asia is growing both larger and older Demographically the most important continent on the world Asia s population currently estimated to be 4.2 billion is expected to increase to about 5.9 billion by 2050 Rapid declines in fertility together with rising life expectancy are altering the age structure of the population so that in 2050 for the first time in history there will be roughly as many people in Asia over the age of 65 as under the age of 15 It is against this backdrop that the Division of Behavioral and Social Research at the U S National Institute on Aging NIA asked the National Research Council NRC through the Committee on Population to undertake a project on advancing behavioral and social research on aging in Asia

An Aging World Barbara Boyle Torrey,Kevin G. Kinsella,Cynthia Murray Taeuber,1987

Handbook of Research on Economic and Social Impacts of Population Aging Bayar, Yilmaz,2021-06-25 The increases in global wealth and the developments in the field of health have led to decreases in mortality rates increases in life expectancy and decreases in fertility rate leading to a population that is rapidly consisting more and more of older individuals The demographic changes affect nearly all parts of society including economics education health social security systems socio cultural activities and more Thus it is essential to study the impacts that an aging population will have on society The Handbook of Research on Economic and Social Impacts of Population Aging analyzes the economic and social impacts of population aging from a multidisciplinary perspective Covering topics such as life expectancy social welfare health social security and more this book is essential for social scientists sociologists demographers economists medical professionals government officials policymakers professionals researchers managers students and academicians looking to understand the effects of an aging population on modern society

Grand Challenges of Our Aging Society National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Center for Economic, Governance, and International Studies, 2010-04-04 Aging populations are generating both challenges and opportunities for societies around the globe Increases in longevity and improvements in health raise many questions What steps can be taken to optimize physical and cognitive health and productivity across the life span How will older people finance their retirement and health care What will be the macroeconomic implications of an aging population How will communities be shaped by the shift in age structure What global interconnections will affect how each society handles the aging of its population To address these questions the National Academies organized a symposium summarized in the present volume to determine how best to contribute to an evidence based dialogue on population aging that will shape policies and programs Presentations in the fields of biology public health medicine informatics macroeconomics finance urban planning and engineering approached the challenges of aging from many different angles The presenters reviewed the current state of knowledge in their respective fields identifying areas of consensus and controversy and delineating the priority questions for further research and policy development

The International Handbook on Aging Erdman P. Palmore, Frank Whittington, Suzanne Kunkel, 2009-10-27 The United Nations World Assembly on Aging has made advancing health and well being into old age a worldwide call for action And this text at hand shows us what researchers worldwide are doing to answer that call Here three of America s most esteemed experts on aging lead a global team of contributors each an expert in his or her country to show us what the top challenges of each nation are and what top research is being done there to meet those While we cannot predict with absolute certainty all of the issues that will arise over the next 20 years we can anticipate some and we must start now to prepare for these challenges an expert from the U S Department of Health and Human Services warned at a recent UN World Assembly on Aging Needed response to the global population shift is not just the responsibility of governments but will be a product of wise long term decisions made by individuals and societies she explained In most nations globally populations are graying and the number of people aged 65 and older is vastly increasing creating a larger segment of senior citizens than the world has ever before seen Across human history the elderly accounted for no more than 3 percent of the world population By the year 2030 the elderly are expected to make up about 25 percent of the world population And while longevity is of course seen as a great success longer lifespan for such masses also creates dilemmas For example the incidence of dementia has already increased significantly with an 11 fold increase in people aged 65 and older in the US since the turn of the century and a similar increase in aged people in Scotland has researchers there scrambling to find treatments for what they expect will be a 75 percent increase in dementia over the next 25 years Chronic diseases that come with aging are already taxing health care systems in the US and around the world to Japan with most experts aware their current health systems would be overrun and lack enough staff and facilities to handle the needs of an elderly population multiplying largely in the coming two decades Increases in psychological issues such as dealing with the depression often striking aged people are impending too as are social issues such as how families and public policies will deal with the changing shape of the family     Aging and the Macroeconomy National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Population, Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences, Board on Mathematical Sciences and Their Applications, Committee on the Long-Run Macroeconomic Effects of the Aging U.S. Population, 2013-01-10 The United States is in the midst of a major demographic shift In the coming decades people aged 65 and over will make up an increasingly large percentage of the population The ratio of people aged 65 to people aged 20 64 will rise by 80% This shift is happening for two reasons people are living longer and many couples are choosing to have fewer children and to have those children somewhat later in life The resulting demographic shift will present the nation with economic challenges both to absorb the costs and to leverage the benefits of an aging population Aging and the Macroeconomy Long Term Implications of an Older Population presents the fundamental factors driving the aging of the U S population as well as its societal implications and likely long term macroeconomic effects in a global context The report finds that while population aging does not pose an insurmountable challenge to the nation it is imperative that sensible policies are implemented soon to allow companies and households to respond It offers four practical approaches for preparing resources to support the future consumption of households and for adapting to the new economic landscape     International Handbook of Population Aging Peter Uhlenberg, 2009-04-29 The International Handbook of Population Aging examines research on a wide array of the profound implications of population aging It demonstrates how the world is changing through population aging and how demography is changing in response to it     Proceedings of the 1st International Conference of Economics, Management, Accounting, and Business Digital (ICEMAB 2024) Echo Perdana Kusumah, Yanto Yanto, 2024-12-21 This is an open access book The first ICEMAB serving as an international conference aims to foster cross disciplinary dialogue stimulate innovation and offer fresh insights into the convergence of digital business management accounting and economics It would be beneficial for scholars professionals and legislators who wish to stay informed and engaged in our rapidly evolving digital landscape     Active Ageing and Healthy Living G. Riva, P. Ajmone Marsan, C. Grassi, 2014-08-21 Increased life expectancy and the ageing of the population have been the subject of attention in Western countries and particularly in Europe for some years now The challenge of squaring the circle between ends and means as well as between personal aspirations and systemic constraints in health and social care continues to be a major concern for policymakers and all those involved in the delivery of services This book Active Ageing and Healthy Living A Human Centered Approach in Research and Innovation as Source of Quality of Life presents the results of a number of research projects from the Universit Cattolica del Sacro Cuore the largest private university in Italy and in Europe with a strong commitment to the areas of medicine and health sciences economics business international relations political science psychology and communications Visions and research directions for the future are also presented and discussed The introduction to the book addresses the challenges posed by an increasingly ageing population and the way in which multidisciplinary research can contribute to positive outcomes The remainder of the book is divided into two sections The first proposes promising research directions for future focus and includes papers on demographic change frailty in the elderly the role of diet in healthy ageing active ageing and positive technology The second section deals with recent developments in research into active ageing and healthy living AA nutrition the role of ICTs for older people work retirement and health and empowering skills for AA HL

Population Aging Donald T. Rowland, 2012-04-26 Population Aging The Transformation of Societies presents an overview and international comparison of the causes consequences and policy implications of one of the major processes of change in contemporary societies It provides a foundation for understanding and reflecting on key demographic and social trends together with related theoretical and policy frameworks that are important in explaining changes and designing informed responses With particular reference to countries that have the oldest or largest aged populations the book presents a synthesis of research on population aging new analyses of trends and a discussion of the major social policy strategies Key topics include the new demography of aging population health family change the Third Age international policy concepts and strategies and comparisons of countries such as in terms of the relative risks they face from population aging and their resilience as changes occur Overall the book presents a broad interdisciplinary perspective on the determinants and consequences of population aging The book is written for an international audience of policy makers educators and practitioners in health and welfare together with students in the social sciences and health sciences It provides an accessible and academically informed exposition of the field for people engaging with issues arising from population aging in their own country
