Research Ethics In Complex Humanitarian Emergencies Summary Of A Workshop:

Research Ethics in Complex Humanitarian Emergencies National Research Council, Committee on Population, Roundtable on the Demography of Forced Migration, 2002-08-13 Situations involving conflict and forced migration have become increasingly commonplace in today's world. The need to understand the causes, consequences, and characteristics of these situations is creating a burgeoning field of research. But given the nature of complex emergency settings, traditional research guidelines may be inappropriate. The research and policy community has recognized this problem and has begun to address issues surrounding the ethics of doing research in emergency settings and among conflict-affected and displaced populations. The Roundtable on the Demography of Forced Migration, under the aegis of the Committee on Population of the National Research Council, held a workshop to examine some of these issues. This report to the roundtable summarizes the workshop presentations and discussion.

Ethical Considerations at the Intersection of Psychiatry and Religion John R. Peteet, Mary Lynn Dell, Wai Lun Alan Fung, 2018 This book explores the ethical dimension of the interface between psychiatry and religion, illustrating core principles with practical examples in a variety of contexts. These include subspecialties such as child, geriatric, forensic, inpatient, and community psychiatry, and settings such as ethics committees, religious organizations, and international conflicts, psychiatric education, and research.

Demographic Assessment Techniques in Complex Humanitarian Emergencies National Research Council, Committee on Population, Roundtable on the Demography of Forced Migration, 2002-09-13 The Roundtable on the Demography of Forced Migration was established by the Committee on Population of the National Research Council in 1999. The roundtable is composed of experts from academia, government, philanthropy, and international organizations. The roundtable's purpose is to serve as an interdisciplinary, nonpartisan focal point for taking stock of what is known about demographic patterns in refugee situations, to apply this knowledge base to assist both policy makers and relief workers, and to stimulate new directions for innovation and scientific inquiry in this growing field of study. The roundtable meets yearly and has also organized a series of workshops held concurrently with roundtable meetings on some of the specific aspects of the demography of refugee and refugee-like situations, including mortality patterns, demographic assessment techniques, and research ethics in complex humanitarian emergencies. This report to the Roundtable on the Demography of Forced Migration is a summary of one such workshop which was held on September 20-21, 2000, under the auspices of the Committee on Population. The purpose of this meeting was to address a basic problem faced by all humanitarian relief agencies in an emergency: how to count the numbers of displaced persons and assess their general well-being. Workshop participants examined different methods for estimating refugee populations and their mortality rates, whether mortality was due to disease and malnutrition or human rights abuses.

Health, Mailman School of Public Health, Columbia University, National Research Council, Committee on Population, Roundtable on the Demography of Forced Migration, 2005-12-23 Providing medical support to the local population during a chronic crisis is difficult. The crisis in the Democratic Republic of the Congo DRC which is characterized by high excess mortality ongoing armed violence mass forced displacement interference by neighboring countries resource exploitation asset stripping and the virtual absence of the state has led to great poverty and a dearth of funds for the support of the health system. International nongovernmental organizations NGOs have stepped in to address the dire humanitarian situation. This study looks at four organizations that support local health care in the eastern DRC: the International Rescue Committee IRC, Malteser Medical Emergency Relief International, Merlin, and the Association Régionale d'Approvisionnement en Médicaments Essentiels ASRAMES. The study makes a comparison of the management and financing approaches of these four organizations by collecting and comparing qualitative and quantitative data on their interaction with the remaining local health providers and the local population. Specific objectives of the study are: 1 To identify which management and financing approaches including the setting of fees are used by the four NGOs supporting healthcare in the eastern DRC; 2 To determine how these financing approaches affect utilization rates in the health zones supported by the four NGOs; 3 To assess how these utilization rates compare with donor and humanitarian standards; 4 To determine at what level fees must be set to allow for cost recovery or cost sharing in health facilities; 5 To identify the managerial problems confronting the four NGOs. Many epidemiological and public health studies focus on the interaction between health providers and target groups. Supporting Local Health Care in a Chronic Crisis: Management and Financing Approaches in the Eastern Democratic Republic of the Congo concentrates more on how the relationship between the supporting NGOs and the local health system actually develops. In addition, a common aspect of many of the epidemiological and public health studies is the search for an optimal or at least appropriate management and financing approach.

War, Humanitarian Crises, Population Displacement, and Fertility Program on Forced Migration and Health at the Mailman School of Public Health, Columbia University, National Research Council, Committee on Population, Roundtable on the Demography of Forced Migration, Kenneth Hill, 2004-08-02

Fertility and reproductive health issues more broadly have tended to be of low priority in humanitarian crises. Public attention is drawn by information concerning the magnitude of refugee flows, death tolls, and numbers of injuries. Reproductive health has been regarded as a longer term issue that could safely be put on the back burner during the crisis phase of an emergency when issues of providing adequate food, clean water, and shelter plus treating acute infectious diseases of crowding take priority. This report reviews what evidence there is concerning the effects of humanitarian crisis on fertility with a view to identifying common patterns that may exist across settings and be of value in guiding responses to future crises.
