Abstract

This study aims to determine the effect of environmental performance, corporate social performance, and carbon emission disclosure on the value of companies listed on the Jakarta Islamic Index (JII) for 2018-2021. This study uses a type of quantitative research. This study uses PROPER ranking data, annual reports, and sustainability reports with a total sample of 36 companies. The results of this study indicate that environmental performance has a significant effect on firm value, meaning that as environmental performance increases, it can increase firm value. Corporate social performance has a significant effect on firm value, meaning that companies that improve corporate social performance will further increase firm value.

Keywords: environmental performance, corporate social performance, disclosure of carbon emissions, corporate value

1. Introduction

The main goal of business organizations is to achieve maximum corporate value. Company value can be interpreted as an investor's response to a business entity in relation to share prices in the capital market. Firm value is an important indicator for shareholders in evaluating a company before making a decision to invest. Shareholders can make company value a benchmark for the level of prosperity and success of a business entity. The high value of the company reflects the success of the company in the prosperity of the principal. This can motivate investors to increase investment in companies that have high corporate value. The company uses this condition as a reason to make efforts to maintain its business excellence so that its main goal can be achieved, which is to achieve maximum corporate value. Efforts to increase corporate value by maximizing the use of resources are often not matched by good environmental management activities. The occurrence of environmental damage due to the company's lack of concern for environmental responsibility will worsen the company's image in the eyes of the public and investors (Mardiana & Wuryani, 2019).

The rise and fall of the company's value can be seen from its share price. In general, every company has the same goal, namely increasing the value of the company, maximizing the wealth of the company's voters or shareholders, and maximizing the value of the company. Companies that have a high level of corporate value are considered to be able to attract investors to invest in the company. The stock market price acts as a barometer of the company's management performance. Stock price volatility makes it difficult for investors to invest. Investors
