

A photograph of an archival storage room. A person with long blonde hair, wearing a dark blue long-sleeved shirt, is standing and reaching up to a high shelf to handle a large cardboard box. The room is filled with tall metal shelving units. On the left, the shelves hold several large cardboard boxes. On the right, the shelves are filled with numerous small, light-colored archival boxes, each with a circular handle. The lighting is bright, coming from overhead fixtures. The text "Advantages and Disadvantages of Archival Research" is overlaid in a large, bold, black-outlined font across the center of the image.

Towards a New Ethnohistory engages respectfully in cross cultural dialogue and interdisciplinary methods to co create with Indigenous people a new decolonized ethnohistory This new ethnohistory reflects Indigenous ways of knowing and is a direct response to critiques of scholars who have for too long foisted their own research agendas onto Indigenous communities Community engaged scholarship invites members of the Indigenous community themselves to identify the research questions host the researchers while they conduct the research and participate meaningfully in the analysis of the researchers findings The historical research topics chosen by the St l community leaders and knowledge keepers for the contributors to this collection range from the intimate and personal to the broad and collective But what principally distinguishes the analyses is the way settler colonialism is positioned as something that unfolds in sometimes unexpected ways within St l history as opposed to the other way around This collection presents the best work to come out of the world s only graduate level humanities based ethnohistory field school The blending of methodologies and approaches from the humanities and social sciences is a model of twenty first century interdisciplinarity
