Urban Transportation Research Branch,1978 Appendix A Development and application of an accessibility measure including application to Regina The Evaluation of Transportation Investment Projects Joseph Berechman,2010-05-26 Throughout the world the use of some kind of a formal transportation project evaluation procedure is a requirement Yet by and large these are partial in fact much weight is often placed on the initial pre engineering phases of the planning process when vital information such as accurate costs and demand projections is largely missing Moreover many of these procedures neglect to consider key issues such as project s risks capital costs financing latent demand market imperfections labor force availability and various incompatibilities between trip rates travel times and activity location As a result projects which are judged as viable under such deficient evaluation schemes may have had a significantly different projection of capital costs and demand should a well founded thorough and efficient evaluation process be used Against this background this book s main objective is to construct a comprehensive and methodical economic planning and decision making framework for the evaluation of proposed transportation infrastructure investment projects Such a framework is founded on four key principles It is based on well established economic transportation and policy analysis theoretical principles it is comprehensive enough to encompass all relevant evaluation issues it is applicable to a wide range of transportation investment projects and it is amenable to empirical application including a sensitivity analysis and alternative scenarios regarding urban regional and national developments
