Environmental Social Science Emilio F. Moran, 2011-09-09 Environmental Social Science offers a new synthesis of environmental studies defining the nature of human environment interactions and providing the foundation for a new cross disciplinary enterprise that will make critical theories and research methods accessible across the natural and social sciences Makes key theories and methods of the social sciences available to biologists and other environmental scientists Explains biological theories and concepts for the social sciences community working on the environment Helps bridge one of the difficult divides in collaborative work in human environment research Includes much needed descriptions of how to carry out research that is multinational multiscale multitemporal and multidisciplinary within a complex systems theory context

Global Climate Change and the U.S. Climate Action Report United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, 2006 Adaptive Governance and Climate Change Ronald Brunner, Amanda Lynch, 2013-01-06 As greenhouse gas emissions and temperatures at the poles continue to rise so do damages from extreme weather events affecting countless lives Meanwhile ambitious international efforts to cut emissions Kyoto Copenhagen have proved to be politically ineffective or infeasible There is hope however in adaptive governance an approach that has succeeded in some local communities and can be undertaken by others around the globe This book provides a political and historical analysis of climate change policy shows how adaptive governance has worked on the ground in Barrow Alaska and other local communities and makes the case for adaptive governance as a complementary approach in the climate change regime

Climate Change and Global Public Health Kent E. Pinkerton, William N. Rom, 2020-11-23 This book is a guide to the research findings and discussions of US and international experts on climate change and respiratory health Since the publication of the first edition climate change has been increasingly acknowledged as being directly related to the prevalence and incidence of respiratory morbidity Evidence is increasing that climate change does drive respiratory disease onset and exacerbation as a result of increased ambient and indoor air pollution desertification heat stress wildfires and the geographic and temporal spread of pollens molds and infectious agents This second edition is fully updated to include the latest research by international experts on topics such as heat waves causing critical care related diseases climate driven air pollution increases and high level ozone and ozone exposure linked to idiopathic pulmonary fibrosis lung cancer and acute lower respiratory infection Seven new chapters have also been added on extreme weather and agricultural safety in California desert dust effects on lung health climate policy and the EPA California s integrated approach to air quality and climate change integrating climate change the environment and sustainability themes into professional health science courses and the role of the physician as climate advocate This is an ideal guide for all pulmonologists and health professionals treating patients with pulmonary disease

A National Strategy for Advancing Climate Modeling Committee on a National Strategy for Advancing Climate Modeling, Board on Atmospheric Sciences and Climate, Division on Earth and Life Studies, 2013-01-07 As climate change has pushed climate patterns outside of historic norms the need for detailed projections is growing across all sectors including agriculture insurance and emergency preparedness planning A National Strategy for Advancing Climate Modeling emphasizes the needs for climate models to evolve substantially in order to deliver climate projections at the scale and level of detail desired by decision makers this report finds Despite much recent progress in developing reliable climate models there are still efficiencies to be gained across the large and diverse U S climate modeling community Evolving to a more unified climate modeling enterprise in particular by developing a common software infrastructure shared by all climate researchers and holding an annual climate modeling forum could help speed progress Throughout this report several recommendations and guidelines are outlined to accelerate progress in climate modeling The U S supports several climate models each conceptually similar but with components assembled with slightly different software and data output standards If all U S climate models employed a single software system it could simplify testing and migration to new computing hardware and allow scientists to compare and interchange climate model components such as land surface or ocean models A National Strategy for Advancing Climate Modeling recommends an annual U S climate modeling forum be held to help bring the nation s diverse modeling communities together with the users of climate data This would provide climate model data users with an opportunity to learn more about the strengths and limitations of models and provide input to modelers on their needs and provide a venue for discussions of priorities for the national modeling enterprise and bring disparate climate science communities together to design common modeling experiments In addition A National Strategy for Advancing Climate Modeling explains that U S climate modelers will need to address an expanding breadth of scientific problems while striving to make predictions and projections more accurate Progress toward this goal can be made through a combination of increasing model resolution advances in observations improved model physics and more complete representations of the Earth system To address the computing needs of the climate modeling community the report suggests a two pronged approach that involves the continued use and upgrading of existing climate dedicated computing resources at modeling centers together with research on how to effectively exploit the more complex computer hardware systems expected over the next 10 to 20 years
