Serpentine Gallery Pavilion:

Sou Fujimoto Naomi Pollock, 2016-05-23 The first comprehensive monograph on Japan's most creative experimental and visionary architect Sou Fujimoto. Occasionally an architect emerges whose vision is so fresh that it causes us to reconsider the very nature of architecture. Sou Fujimoto is one of those architects. Guided by instinct and keen observation, he casts convention aside. Instead, he blurs boundaries and routinely rethinks basic building blocks. Both comfortably familiar and curiously enigmatic, Fujimoto's dynamic work grabs our attention, then lingers on in our minds. Born and bred in Hokkaido, Fujimoto received his undergraduate degree in architecture from Tokyo University before embarking on an uncharted solo exploration that probed the possibilities of architecture. Unfettered by the ideas and practices of others, Fujimoto's work has clarity of thought and purity of execution seldom seen. Fujimoto garnered significant international attention for his popular 2013 Serpentine Pavilion in London. Fujimoto was the youngest architect to receive the highly regarded commission. In 2012, he was part of the Japanese team that won a Golden Lion award for Best National Participation at the Venice Architecture Biennale for their design of alternative housing concepts for the homes that were destroyed by the tsunami.

Peter Zumthor. Hortus Conclusus Peter Zumthor, Serpentine Gallery, 2011. For his 2011 Serpentine Pavilion commission, Peter Zumthor provided visitors with a hortus conclusus, a secret garden whose contents were designed by Piet Oudolf, hidden within an enigmatic plain black structure. This volume records the pavilion, which received rave reviews, with photographs and a fully illustrated index of the plants used.

Serpentine Gallery Pavilions Philip Jodidio, 2011. Since 2000, the Serpentine Gallery in London's Kensington Gardens has called on some of the world's top architects to design summer pavilions, temporary structures that are erected next to the Gallery itself for a three-month period. The Serpentine, which was built in 1934 as a tea pavilion, opened in 1970 as a showplace for exhibitions of modern and contemporary artists, ranging from Matthew Barney to Dan Flavin, Ellsworth Kelly, Louise Bourgeois, or Rachel Whiteread. The pavilions in the Programme, that was conceived in 2000 by the Serpentine Director Julia Peyton Jones, are the work of international architects or design teams who, at the time of the Serpentine's invitation, have not completed a building in England. A maximum of six months from invitation to completion is allotted. The only architecture program of its type in the world, the Serpentine Gallery Pavilions attract up to 250,000 visitors each summer. The Serpentine Pavilion is regularly ranked in the top 5 most attended architecture and design exhibitions worldwide. In The Art Newspaper's annual survey of museums and galleries, visitor figures are unbelievably good. I couldn't single one out that I have liked more than the others; they have all been masterpieces. Zaha
