Developing Quality in Personal Social Services Adalbert Evers, Riitta Haverinen, Kai Leichsenring, Gerald Wistow, 2019-05-23 First published in 1997 this volume is about the challenge of introducing business originated concepts of quality assurance personal social services are currently confronted with all over Europe Undoubtedly the new orientation towards a more business like approach in social welfare settings will raise professionalism client orientation and controlling instead of mere inspection There is evidence however that the specificities of personal social services are not always taken into account if it comes to introducing market values and mechanisms Due to this development it becomes essential to promote more adequate criteria for quality standards in the very field of personal social services The challenge is to maintain a certain standard of service provision while at the same time reconsidering the preconditions for defining quality This will imply the search for a consensus between allegedly diverging approaches i e between their different basic concepts aims and standards Given the social and economic context within which these developments are taking place the focus of the contributions is on their critical assessment in different European countries An overview is given about national developments in the areas of care for older persons and other social services The contributors from Austria Belgium Denmark Finland Germany Italy the Netherlands Norway Sweden and the UK look at how and by whom quality is defined and what challenges the actors of the traditionally mixed economy of personal social services are meeting Empirical evidence about user involvement and satisfaction is given but also theoretical reasoning about the impact of business approaches on a public good Thus the book tries to fill an important gap in practice research and policy making concerning personal social services and quality issues Managing State Social Work John Harris, 2018-12-20 Published in 1998 The industrial model of the labour process developed by Braverman was applied to social work in the radical social work literature The book engages in a more critical examination of the application of the labour process perspective to social work with particular reference to front line management in a local authority context It begins with a review of the labour process literature which demonstrates the extent to which the independence of Braverman's model on scientific management was undermined in the post Braverman debate The radical texts orthodox Bravermanian approach to the social work labour process is considered In those texts the social work labour process is represented as having moved towards an industrial model which steadily encroached on the autonomy of front line field social workers through managers wresting of control over their work The book advances an alternative model of the social work labour process which takes account of the distinctive features of social work as a state mediated bureau professional labour process Findings from a small scale case study of a social services department are presented Data from the study are used to test the bureau professional model of the social work labour process against the orthodox Bravermanian model Developments in the social services department s organizational structure are set out and the position of front line managers is considered through an exploration of their identifications and commitments in relation to management and trade unionism The data from their accounts support the bureau professional model of the labour process and the position of front line managers emerges as more ambiguous than the radical social work literature indicated Front line managers did not share global goals with senior management nor were their interests merged straightforwardly with those of social workers
