first museums were quite literally wonderful founded that is on the disciplined application of the faculty of wonder The type of wonder employed was not that post Romantic idea of disbelief but rather an active form of curiosity developed during the Renaissance particularly by the individuals who set about gathering objects and founding museums to further their enquiries The argument put forward in this book is that this museological practice of using objects actually to create as well as disseminate knowledge makes just as much sense today as it did in the seventeenth century and further that the best way of reinvigorating contemporary museums is to return to that form of wonder By taking such a comparative approach this book works both as a scholarly historical text and as an historically informed analysis of the key issues facing today's museums As such it will prove essential reading both for historians of collecting and museums and for anyone interested in the philosophies of modern museum management

Exposing Electronics Bernard Finn, 2000-12-21 It is clear that artifacts have the power to provoke thought inspire action and arouse passions There is evidence of this in the ever increasing number of museums as well as in the ability of those museums to stimulate controversy through exhibits As a consequence much has been written analyzing the interaction between objects and museum visitors Less well recognized or understood is the value of objects for historical research In this series of books we propose to show by example how artifacts can be employed in the study of the history of science and technology in ways ranging from motivating a line of research to providing hard evidence in the solution of an otherwise insoluble problem The first volume focused on medicine in this the second volume the topic our authors address is electronics As readers will discover there is considerable scope in the range of topics and in the range of uses of artifacts There is also a section that suggests to readers what kind of questions they might consider when they visit electrical exhibits and where those exhibits are to be found This series is sponsored by the Deutsches Museum in Munich the Science Museum in London and the Smithsonian Institution in Washington with help from professional historians in other museums and elsewhere
