years 1965-70 Contemporary Perspectives on Literacy in Early Childhood Education Olivia Saracho, Bernard Spodek, 2002-04-01 This volume identifies and critically analyzes research studies related to the critical skills environments and adult interactions that contribute to young children's literacy development. The volume reminisces on the reformation that has emerged in the language and literacy education of young children. Prior to the 1960s few studies were available on pre-first grade literacy. Then studies began to emerge in the 1960s focusing on the reading readiness paradigm and on the conventional assumption that literacy development was only introduced when children experienced formal reading instruction in school. Sulzby and Teale 1986. Fortunately, Durkin 1966 found that there were children reading before first grade and determined that the reading readiness paradigm was theoretically and pragmatically incongruous. Others followed Durkin's footsteps. Sulzby and Teale 1986 identify the following concepts about young children's acquisition of literacy learning:

- 1 Literacy development originates well before children are introduced to formal instruction.
- 2 The notion that reading precedes writing or that writing precedes reading is a fallacy.
- 3 Literacy blooms in real life settings and by performing real life activities that are used to get things done.
- 4 The purposes of literacy for young children are as important in learning about writing and reading as are the dimensions of literacy.
- 5 Children's cognitive development is important to their acquisition of literacy during the years from birth to six.
- 6 Children learn written language when they actively engage in their world.

Competent teachers throughout the United States suggest that prior to attending school children have acquired a distinctive culture, collection of experiences, and group of abilities. Vacca and Vacca 2000. Many prekindergarten children have been in a group setting for three and four years such as a child care setting where teachers and caregivers teach them reading and writing.
